AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY.

Syrian Songs, Proverbs, and Stories; collected, translated, and annotated.—By Henry Minor Huxley, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.

INTRODUCTION.

During the summer of 1900, while living in Bhamdûn, a small village of the Lebanon, to the east of Beirût, I collected a number of songs and proverbs typical of the locality. My Arabic teacher, Sitt Rāḥîl Jörjis Tâbit, first obtained these from the Christian natives, and then, at her dictation, I wrote them in the dialect of the region; in this vernacular they appear in the following pages. The stories are written in the dialect of the Christians of Beirût.

In writing the vernacular in Arabic characters it is impossible to avoid certain inconsistencies. In every case I have written the consonants as they are pronounced: أنا and not غلم and not منه . I have thought best, however, not to write the Arabic phonetically when this would introduce confusion and prevent the recognition of a word by students of the classical language. Thus we write عنا , and not the phonetic form, which might be written ختا . The transliteration, on the other hand, has been written strictly in accordance with the actual pronunciation. By so doing, I have, of course, been obliged to depart from the principle which should govern the transliteration of the classical language: namely, that in reading the transliteration, an Arabist should immediately be able to see how the word is spelled in the original. To quote the above example again, while writing with in the Arabic, in transliteration I have written kullū.

In some of the funeral songs, it will be noticed that at times the metre is decidedly defective. I have, however, left these songs, with all their imperfections, exactly in their original form, for only so will they show the actual compositions of the fellāḥîn. In the same way, the stories are in the exact form in which they were first told. In the translations my primary object has been literalness and elearness, rather than literary excellence.

The Arabic text has been used as the basis in numbering the lines. The last word of a numbered line of Arabic text has the same number opposite the line in which this word occurs in the transliteration and the translation. For convenience of reference I have arranged the lines of the translations of the songs in the same relative positions occupied by the lines of the Arabic text.

An attempt has been made in the Bibliography to give the titles of all books and articles which are of importance to the student of modern Arabic. I have tried to make the list of vernacular texts as complete as possible. Several of the dictionaries, grammars, and books of proverbs, deal with the classical language.

I desire to express my thanks to Sitt Rāḥîl Jörjis Tâbit for her painstaking and conscientions help, without which my own work would have been impossible. To Professor Toy of Harvard University, and Professor Torrey of Yale University, I am under obligation for many valuable suggestions. I am indebted to Dr. Enno Littmann of Princeton University for his careful reading of the manuscript of the wedding songs, and to Sitt Rāḥîl Ḥalil Ṣalîbī of Montclair and formerly of Bḥamdûn, for a final reading of the Arabic manuscript. Finally, my thanks are due to Messrs. B. T. Babbitt Hyde, Clarence M. Hyde, V. Everit Macy, and I. Newton Phelps Stokes, by whose generosity I was enabled to carry on the work in Syria.

TRANSLITERATION.

- ' is used only when hemza occurs in the middle or at the end of a word.
- $\psi = b$.
- w=t.
- $\dot{\underline{}} = \underline{t}$.
- The soft French pronunciation of the letter j. = j. Not the sound of dj found in many parts of Svria.
- ريا=ح خ=الا.
- s=d.
- S=d.
- j=r.
- j=z.
- $\omega = s$.
- ش=š.
- =s.
- ال=في
- b=1.
- =z.
- =3.This symbol, used by Socin and others, seems superior to ', which is used as the sign of the rough breathing being a consonant, should, like the other in Greek. consonants, have a symbol written on the line, and not merely a sign for breathing, written above the line.
- $\dot{g}=\dot{g}$.
- =f:
- =k. When is not pronounced, its position is indicated in transliteration by '.
- $\omega = k$.
- J = 1.
- -m.
- $\omega = n$.
- 8=h.
- ,= w.
- ے=y.

Vowels.

In the transliteration of the vowels, I have, in the main, followed Landberg and Jewett.

a=a in the German Mann.

 \tilde{a} =a lengthening of a, often indicated by $\stackrel{\checkmark}{\vdash}$ in the Arabic.

When the accent occurs on the syllable containing \bar{a} , the latter is written \bar{a} . This rule applies also to \bar{a} , \bar{e} , \bar{i} , \bar{o} , and \bar{a} .

 $\ddot{a}=a$ with the imâla. Like the a in English lad.

 \bar{a} =a lengthening of \ddot{a} . We have this sound in the Arabic words کات $k\hat{a}n$, کات $k\hat{a}tib$, etc.

n=a neutral vowel pronounced as the u in English hut.

e = e in English met.

 $\tilde{e} = ay$ in English say.

i = i in English sit.

i = ee in English seen.

o=o in German Sonne.

 $\bar{o} = o$ in English note.

 $\ddot{o}=u$ in English curve is nearly the exact equivalent. Somewhat like the French eu, and the German \ddot{o} .

u=u in English put.

 $\bar{u} = oo$ in English boot.

ai (diphthong) = i in English mite.

au (diphthong) = ow in English cow.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

All articles which I have been unable to consult are marked with an asterisk (*). Unless a special abbreviation is printed in italics after the title, reference to an article will be made simply by the author's surname.

SYRIAN SONGS, PROVERBS, AND STORIES.

Wedding Songs.1

All of the wedding and funeral songs which I collected were sung by women.

Songs in honor of the bride. These fall naturally into three groups: (a) Those sung before she leaves her father's house; (b) Those sung while she is going to the bridegroom's house;

(c) Those sung after her entrance to the bridegroom's house.

(a) Before leaving her father's house.

ايها قالوا عنّك طويله قلت الرميم بالعسكر ايها قالوا عنّك صفرا قلت الشبع بالمسكب ابها قالوا عنّك بيضا قلت الياسمين ابيض

ايها قالوا عنَّك سمرا قلت احلى من السكِّم لي لي لي لي

éha kálū sannik tavíli kilt ir-rumh bil-saskar éha kálū sannik spfra kilt iš-šemas bil-meskeb éha kálū sannik baida kilt il-yāsmín abyad éha kálū sannik spmra kilt ahla min is-sukkor lí lí lí lí.

They said that you were (lit. concerning you) tall; I said, The lance among the soldiers;

They said that you were pale; I said, Wax in the mould; They said that you were white; I said, The jasmine is white; They said that you were brown; I said, Sweeter than sugar.

The exclamation ايها at the beginning of each verse is variously pronounced éha, aiha, or îha; Dalman has awīha. At the end of each song, there is a rapid repetition of the syllable lî in a very high pitch. These shrill cries of the women are called the زلغوط خوطه زلاغيط zalāġît; singular, ولغوطه zalġūṭa.

ايها عيونك السود خلّتني انا غنّي ايها وحاجبينك سبيوا عرق الحياه منّي ايها كنت نايمه عزّ النوم متهنّيه

ايها اجي خيالك على بالي وجنّنّي لي لي لي لي

éha sayınık is-sud hollitni ana yonni éha ü-hüjbênik sibyü sörk il-hayā miuni éha kunt nâyimi sözz in-nóm mithennyi éha ija hiyâlik sala bâli ü-jennenni lí lí lí lí.

Your black eyes made me sing,

And your two eyebrows captured the essence of my life from me;

I was sleeping happily in my deep slumber;

Your image came on my thoughts, and maddened me.

Cf. Littmann p. 61, No. 2.

3. ايها بياضك بياض الورقة ايها حمرة خدودك خلقة ايها يا سعادة اللي بياخدك

ايها يا شاطره يا لبقه لي لي لي لي

éha bayádik bayád il-wərrika éha hamrit hədádik hulka éha yá sasádt illi byáhdik éha yá šátra yá libka lí lí lí lí.

Your fairness is the fairness of paper;

The redness of your cheeks is natural.
Oh the happiness of him who will take you,

Oh clever and elegant one!

The s of سعادة is pronounced as part of the following word اللي.

Cf. Littmann p. 21, No. 64. vol. XXIII. 13

4.

ایها بیاضك بیاض المرمر ایها شعرك فتایل عنبر ایها الك شامه عا راس خدّك

ايها سودا وما بتتغبر لي لي لي لي لي

éha bayûdik bayûd il-marmar éha šasrik fetâyil sanbar éha ilik šắmi sả rás hoddik éha sauda ñ-mâ btitġobbor lí lí lí lí.

Your fairness is the fairness of marble;
Your hair is braids of ambergris;
You have a mole on the upper part of your cheek;
It is black, and will not become dust-colored.

الك for the classical على. على for على. The Syrians regard a mole as a mark of beauty, particularly if there are hairs growing from it.

5.

ايها طلّت من طواقيها ايها لاحت بتراكيها ايها يا بيها جيب الشمعات

ايها للعروس تا نجليها لي لي لي لي

êha tullit min tawāķîha êha yā bêha jīb iš-šemasāt éha láhit bi-trākîha éha lil-sarús tá nijlíha lí lí lí lí .

She looked from her windows;

She appeared with her Turkish ear-rings.

Oh her father, bring the candles

For the bride, that we may escort her (in her wedding-march).

Before leaving her father's house, the bride, holding a candle in each hand, and supported by old women, walks slowly back and forth three times through the length of the room. طلّت is used in place of the classical حتّى.

ايها عروسي ودّينا سلام ليكي ايها سليتاتك دهب تليق على ايديكي ايها مقدّر المازيليق على جبينك ايها غيّبتي القمر من بين عينيكي لي لي لي لي لي éha sarúsi woddéna salám léki éha sletátik deheb tlík sal'idéki éha mkoddor ilmáz yelík sal'ejbínik éha gaiyébti il-komor min bén sainéki lí lí lí lí.

My bride, we have sent greeting to you;
Your bracelets of gold befit your hands;
The circlet of diamonds befits your forehead;
You have caused the moon to disappear (by the radiance of the diamonds) between your eyes.

ejbinik for jebinik. In regard to this pronunciation, Professor Torrey writes: "In a word of two or more syllables, beginning with a short open syllable, the first vowel sound is often transposed, so as to stand before the first consonant, instead of after it." Thus we have mlih or emlih, ketir or ektir, etc.

7.

ايها اللّه معك اللّه معك ايها كتر البكي ما بينفعك ايها ان كان مسمار في بيت ابوكي ايها اقبعيه وخديه معك لي لي لي لي لي éha vlla masik vlla masik éha kutr il-bikī mā byinfasik éha in kān mismār fi bét abūkī éha ökbasīh ū-ḥudīh masik lí lí lí lí.

God be with you, God be with you,

Much weeping will not profit you;

If there is a nail in the house of your father,

Draw it out, and take it with you.

The second half of this song means that on this great occasion of her life, the bride's father will allow her to take anything she wishes from his house, even to the very nails.

ه. ايها يا عروس قومي لنسيم فيكي ايها عنّا علالي متل علاليكي ايها حماتك حبّيها وعزّيها

ایہا اعملیہا بدال امّك تربّیكي لي لي لي لي

éha yá sarás kámi lmsír fiki éha sanna saláli mitl salálíki éha homátik hebbíha ü-sözzíha éha asmlíha bidál immik trobbíki lí lí lí lí.

Rise, oh bride, let us escort you;

We have upper chambers like your upper chambers;
Love and respect your mother-in-law;
Make her, in your mother's place, train you.

This contraction is common in the Lebanon and in the towns. To the south, particularly between Karak and Petra, I have heard the pronunciation sandana. This use of J with the first person of the imperfect with the meaning "let me," "let us," is comparatively rare. More frequent is the use of the verb خلينا نسير.

Cf. Dalman p. 212. In place of limstr, Dalman has lanzūr.

(b) Song in the bride's honor, sung as she goes to the bride-groom's house.

9.

ايها عروسنا طالعه من دار ابوها ايها يا عروس لهّي ديّال فسطانك ايها مال الخل لهّن شاف قامتها

ايها فتّع الورد من راس الطرابيني لي لي لي لي

éha sarúsna tálsa min dár abúha éha yá sarús limmi diyál fustánik éha mál in-nnhul limman šáf kāmítha éha fettah il-ward min rás it-trābíni lí lí lí lí.

Our bride is ascending from the mansion of her father.

Oh bride, raise the train of your dress.

The palm bent when it saw her figure;

The roses opened from the ends of the branches.

(c) Songs in the bride's honor after her entrance to the bridegroom's house.

10.

ايها مين قال عنّك سمرا يا طلعة البدر ايها يا سمسم مقشور يا عسل شهدِ ايها انا لحطّ لك ضهري لقطّعك النهرِ ايها يا حبيبة قلبي ويا كنّة الدهرِ لي لي لي لي لي êha mîn kâl sannik somra yâ tolsat il-bedrī êha yâ simsum makšûr yâ sasel šehdī êha ana lehott lik doheri likottasök in-nohrī êha yâ habîbet kolbī û-yā kinnet id-dohrī lî lî lî lî.

Who said that you are brown, oh face of the full moon,
Oh peeled sesame, oh honey-comb?

Let me put my back for you, let me take you across the river.
Oh beloved of my heart, oh daughter-in-law forever.

11.

ايها دفّ لك طبول الفرح من دخلتك لباب الدار الهار الدار الهار والنسرين والازهار

ايها بحدورنا زعق وطريّاتنا تشعل نار

ايها سلّم تمّ اللي عليكي شارلي لي لي لي

éha dokk lik tobúl il-forok min daholtik li-báb id-dár éha fettáhlik il-ward win-nisrín wil-azhár éha bohhárna zasak ű-traiyátna tišsil nár éha sellim timm illi saléki šár lí lí lí lí.

The drums of happiness played for you since your entrance to the door of the mansion;

The roses and the white roses and the flowers opened for you;

Our incense burned high, and our chandelier will blaze with fire; (God) give peace to the mouth which advised you.

. ثريّانا for طريّاتنا

12.

ايها اهلا وسهلا بالحلوة اليوم ضيفتنا ايها اهلا وسهلا بالحلوة اليوم شرقتنا ايها كنتي غريبة واليوم صرتي كنتنا ايها بشّرت فيكي يا حبيبة كلّ عيلتنا لي لي لي لي لي éha ähel' au-séhela bil-ḥelwi il-yóm ḍaif´ıtna éha ähel' au-séhela bil-ḥelwi il-yóm šmrnf´ıtna éha kuntī ġmrībi wil-yóm smrtī kinnítna éha beššert fíkī yá ḥabîbit kill sailítna lî lî lî lî.

Welcome to the beautiful one, to-day she is our guest;
Welcome to the beautiful one, to-day she has honored us.
You were a stranger and to-day you have become our daughter-in-law;

I have given the good news of you, oh beloved of all our family.

After the letters ج, ج, مض ط, في ع ع ط, في ع مظ أ, في أ is generally pronounced ai. To this rule, however, there are many exceptions. There are differences according to locality: in Beirût and its vicinity صيف are pronounced seft and def; in the Lebanon, saif and daif.

ایها یا بیضه یا غضّه

ایها یا سمکہ فی البحم تلعب بسناسل فضّہ ایها حطّینا لاہوکی من المال تا یرضی ایها اصلحی بینّا ما عاشت البغضہ لی لی لی لی éha yá baida yá gudda éha yá semeki fi'l-bohor tilsab bi-sinásil fudda éha hotténa labúki min il-mál tá yörda éha őselhi bénna ma sášit il-bugda lí lí lí lí.

Oh fair, oh fresh one,

Oh fish playing in the sea among chains of silver; We paid the money to your father, so that he should be satisfied; Make peace between us; may the hate not survive.

Cf. Dalman p. 264.

Songs in honor of the bridegroom.

14.

ايها شو ها العريس اللي حبّوه بيت حماه ايها شو ها الها كبيرهم وزغيرهم وتعوا بهواه ايها قال العريس انا حبّيتهم اكتبر

ایھا نزلوا علی قلبي احلی من السكّر لي لي لي

éha šá hel-sarís illi hebbúh bét homáh éha kebírhum ű-ezjírhum wókasű bi-häwáh éha kál il-sarís ana hobbéthum aktar éha nizlű sala kolbi ahla min is-sukkor lí lí lí lí. What bridegroom is this, whom the family of the mother-inlaw loved?

Their eldest and their youngest fell in love with him. The bridegroom said, "I loved them more;

They made an impression (lit. descended) on my heart sweeter than sugar."

for the classical هـا آلـعـريـس for the classical هـا آلـعـريـس.

15.

ايها حلّت الصلا حلّت الصلا

ايها وارتفعت النجمه فوق بواب العليا

ایها یا مین یبشر میمته

ایها تکّلل عریسنا اکلیل الهنا لي لي لي لي

éha ḥnllit iṣ-ṣpla ḥnllit iṣ-ṣpla éha wirtefasit in-nejmi fók buwáb il-sölya éha yá mín yebéššir mémtü éha teknllel sarísna eklíl il-hena lí lí lí lí.

The service is finished, the service is finished,

And the star has risen above the doors of Heaven.

Oh who will give his mother the good news?

Our bridegroom has been crowned with the crown of happiness.

הייא for the diminutive אייה. The verb las come to mean simply "to be married" (see Wortabet).

Miscellaneous songs at weddings.

Song to the bridegroom's family.

ایها عصفور عا الدِالیه بلبل یترغل له ایها عصفور عا الدِالیه بلبل یترغل له ایها اخدین بنات الاصایل الله یسهّلهم ایها انا لروح للسلطان عبد الحمید واقول له ایها لحظه مُن عروستنا بتسوی عسکرك کلّه لي لي لي لي éha sasfár sād-dályi bilbul yitnrýillū éha ähdín binát il-asáyil nlla yesehhilhum éha ana lerúh lis-sultán sabd il-hamíd ū-killū éha lnhza min sarūsítna btiswa saskarak killū lí lí lí lí.

A bird on the vine, a nightingale will sing for him; (You are) taking the daughters of the nobles, may God help them.

Let me go to the Sultan 3abd il-Ḥamîd, and say to him,
"A glance from our bride is worth the whole of your army."

seems to be derived from the classical form غرفى; which has the same meaning. When a pronoun occurs with the preposition J, the resulting word is pronounced as though it were a part of the preceding verb; in the present case this has resulted in pronouncing the two words in such a way that the \dot{z} is pronounced without the \dot{z} edda, which would regularly be found in this form of the verb. killū: in the vernacular, the \dot{z} of the first person singular of the imperfect is often omitted.

Cf. Dalman p. 212, Littmann p. 61, No. 8.

Song for the priest.

ايها يا خورينا يا لابس ايها يا سكّم اليابس ايها يا معمّد الصبيان ايها يا مكّلل العرايس لي لي لي لي لي éha yâ hūrîna yâ låbis éha yâ sukkm il-yåbis éha yâ masammid iṣ-ṣubyān éha yâ mekéllil il-sarāyis lî lî lí lí lí.

Oh our priest, oh well-dressed one, Oh baptizer of the boys, Oh dried sugar; Oh marrier of the brides!

Cf. Littmann p. 22, No. 85.

18.

A girl's song for her four brothers.

ایها اخوتی اربعه اربعه یا ربّی خلّیهم ایها اخوتی اربعه اربعه یا ربّی خلّیهم ایها یلعبوا بالسیف والترس قدّام باب علالیهم ایها اطّل من الشبّاك امّهم وتنادیهم ایها وتصرخ بالصوت یا ربّی خلّیهم لی لی لی لی éha aljúti arbas arbas yá robbi hollíhum éha yilsabu bis-séf wit-törs koddám báb salálíhum éha ittull min iš-šibbák immhum witnádíhum éha u-tisroh bis-saut yá robbi hollíhum lí lí lí lí.

My brothers are four, four, oh Lord, preserve them;

They play with the sword and the shield before the door of their upper chambers.

Their mether locks from the window and calls them.

Their mother looks from the window and calls them, And cries out, Oh Lord, preserve them.

تَطلُّ for تَطلُّ . Cf. Littmann p. 22, No. 77.

19.

A girl's song for her small brother.

ايها خيّ الزغير دراع الجوح بيلمّه ايها اجى ورد الجوري لخدمته وشمّه ايها سمّوا

ايها تعلّموا يا شباب لعب الجريد منّه لي لي لي لي

éha haiyī iz-zýîr drás ij-júh bīlimmū éha ija ward ij-júrī li-hódemtu ū-šemmū éha semmū yá binåt semmū éha tasallemū yá šebåb lösb ij-jeríd minnū lî lî lî lí. A drás of cloth will cover my small brother;

The roses of Bengal came to his service, and he smelled them.

Pronounce the name of God, oh maidens, pronounce the name of God.

Learn from him, oh youths, the play of the sticks.

A drās is about 26 inches. استوا: to pronounce the name of God is to guard against the influence of the Evil Eye. Cf. Dalman p. 186. العب الجريد: a game in which the players throw short light spears at each other. Sometimes played on horseback.

A girl's song for her two brothers.

ايها اخوتي تنين ملّي تنين ايها يا حبّة اللولو على الجبهتين ايها لبّا راحوا لعند افنديهم وحكوا ها الكلمتين

ايها تغامزوا الحكّام وقالوا ها الشباب من اين لي لي لي لي

êha ahûtî tnên millî tnên

êha ya hobbt il-lûlû sala'j-jibhetên éha limma ráhū lasönd efendíhum ũ-ḥakū hel-kilmtén éha teġámazū il-ḥekkắm ũ-ḥálū heš-šebắb mnén lí lí lí lí.

My brothers are two; what two!

Oh pearl on the two foreheads!

When they went to their Effendi and spoke these few words,
The governors exchanged looks, and said, "Whence these young men"?

Song for a young man present at a wedding.

ايها قولوا يا ناس كلّكم قولوا ايها شو ها الشابّ الظريف ومزينه طوله ايها تمّه خاتم دهب محبوك بلولو ايها عقبال امّه وخيّاته يزلغطوا له لي لي لي لي لي éha külü ya nős killkum külü éha šū heš-šebb iz-zpríf ü-mzénü tülü éha timmű hátim deheb mahbúk bi-lűlü éha snkbűl immű ű-haiyátű yiznlyutúlü lí lí lí lí.

Say, oh people, all of you say,

Who is this handsome young man, whose ornament is his height:

His mouth is a ring of gold set with pearls.

I hope that his mother and his sisters will sing for him.

Cf. Littmann p. 18, No. 39; p. 63, No. 11.

22.

Song for a small boy named 3âdil.

ايها عادل زغيّر عا بسط الحرير يمشي ايها كفّه محنّا صبيعه زبد محشي ايها سألت ربّ السماء والواحد العرشي

ايها كان القمر بالسماء شو نزّله يمشي لي لي لي لي

éha sádil zvýaiyvr sá bust il-harír yimšī éha keffu mvhanna spbísů zebed mehšī éha se'elt rvbb is-semä' wil-wáhid il-saršī éha kắn il-komor bis-semä' šũ nézzelű yimšī lí lí lí lí.

Bâdil is small, and he walks on carpets of silk;

His palms are colored with henna, and his fingers are smeared with ointment.

I asked the Lord of Heaven and the Enthroned One (lit. the one of the throne);

"The moon was in the heavens, what brought it down to walk?"

Henna is put on the hands as a sign of rejoicing.

23.

Song for the guests while food is being served.

ایها حجّتین وحجّه ایها اربع عواني معها ایها اربع غرایر سمسم ایها علی کلّ حبّه حجّه لي لي لي لي

A double health and a health, Four sacks of sesame, And four healths with it;

For every grain a health!

غراير: 1 jprári=12 midds, or 216 litres. Cf. Jessup p. 329, Littmann p. 23, No. 95.

24.

Song for a young man.

ايها يا خواجه بطرس يا سيفين يوم الحرب ايها يا شمع مكّه وضو القمر عا الدرب ايها باعت لك السلطان يا سجيع القلب

Oh Hewâja Butrus, oh two swords in the day of war,

Oh candles of Mekka, and light of the moon on the road! The Sultan is sending (word) to you, oh upright of heart,

"Kill and hang and erect gallows on the road."

The title خواجه is applied only to a man who is a Christian.

The princess of the maidens is ready (lit. has packed); ready and she wishes to go;

Ready (to go) from the mansion of her father, and the white veil gleams (about her).

The Raven of Death came before her,

he said, "Without her I shall not depart."

Oh her father, swear for her,

that you will not (lit. do not) let your daughter go. "By the life of my father, for me there will be no return to the mansion." 5

ست: in the translation, I have given the original meaning of "princess," rather than the ordinary meaning of "lady." احلف for حلوف

Why must I mourn you, oh my delicate one, under the shade of the walnut-tree, in the light of the moon? How shall I mourn you and your father absent; and the candles are in his pocket, and he gave me no word.

in the vernacular, both شبعات and شبعات are used for the plural. In funeral songs, a girl is often likened to a bride. For the use of the candles in this connection, see note to No. 5.

Song for a married woman.

Tâbti is ascending in her Cashmere dress;
wearing the ring on her right hand.
Seeking her father, she wishes to see him;
she fears death, and the dismal (lit. heavy) state.

This is Tâbti; by my Creator, if she is dressed, she will be like the moon appearing in April.

Peace on you, oh mother of the almond-shaped eyes;
your dress is of silk, and your handkerchiefs are rose-colored.

This is the bride, and by my Creator, were she dressed, she would be like the moon, were it to appear in the summer.

الله يسلّم (lit. your peace) is the salutation used to a sick person, who answers, الله يسلّم عمرك or simply مرك .

33.

A second song for Tâbti.

Oh Tâbti, your hair is curled;

by the life of your father, return, oh my bride.

"By the life of my father, I cannot return;

the road to the graves is impossible (lit. reversed) for returning."

The next four songs were composed in memory of Halîl Hair Vlla, who was a doctor in the British Army, and died in the Sudân.

Oh Doctor, we have sent to Constantinople, to the Sulțân 3abd il-Mejîd have we sent;

To the Sultân 3abd il-Mejîd and to the seven kings; they will come, they will comfort us for you.

The cock of the heavens crew, weeping;

the doctor of the troops has gone.

Bring forth the bay mare, bridle her;

let her go to the threshing-floors.

Bring forth the bay mare, bridle her;

to the mansion of his father, take her.

Oh Sudân, you have mocked us,

in your market, and in your shops.

Oh his father, meet them,

the ships have anchored in the harbor.

The beating of the sword, all of it

befits his arms;

My lord wishes the bay mare to caracole.

Servants will play with the sword before him.

Oh my brother, hurry to me; a woe has fallen upon me.

It is a woe of woes;

death was descending (to be added) to it.

Rise, lament, oh relatives; oh my mother, weep for me;

Weep for me, oh my sisters.

death has in it no rejoicing.

The last part of my life,

my brother and my comrades were (present);

And they began to cry out with their voices,

"Oh Halîl, oh my eyes!"

How did these woes arise?

They left me in the foreign lands.

Rise, lament, oh relatives,

and put on black veils for me.

Lift the trouble from my heart,

and speak to the sad mother.

Oh Holy Virgin, receive me;

oh Protecting Angel, oh my eyes!

In several places, the conjunction, has been used where it seems unnecessary; there are really two clauses where we should expect only one. In a translation of l. 1, the unexpressed meaning might be indicated as follows: "Oh my brother, (rise) and hurry to me; (there is) a woe, and it has fallen upon me."

I. 6: عيون is a term of endearment. The plural عيون is also used in the vernacular.

Alas, oh handsome (possessor) of the moustaches, that you should be buried under the earth. "Death destroyed my strength,

Bantar, chief (lit. father) of the youths, has died; Bantar, father of courage, has died;

he was worth a thousand foot-soldiers.

"Oh my brother, run quickly, pluck the string of the rebâb.

My heart and my eyes melted

Death is the departure from the loved ones; in their distance they forgot me.

Death is the departure from the dear ones;

Ah! the heaviness of the woes!

In my trouble they left me,

In my trouble they forsook me."

10

The compassionate mother cried,

"Oh the blindness of my eyes!"

Lines 1, 3-4, and 11 are the direct utterances of the singer, while lines 2 and 5-10 are supposed to be quoted from the deceased doctor. L. 4: 3antar is still regarded as one of the great mythical heroes.

The next four songs were for a young man named Sasid.

The house, oh Sasid, we have forsaken from the day of (your) departure, and we have not entered it;

From the day of departure, oh handsome bridegroom, we have painted its doors with indigo. Oh Sasîd, your daughter has craved you; she wishes to see how time has changed (lit. oppressed) you.

(There will be) a return of Sasîd to his beautiful house.

Oh how splendid are the costumes which are hung up! 5 Oh how handsome is Sa3îd, and (how good) his return to the house:

at least for the feast-days and for Palm-Sunday.

This song recalls the custom, prevalent among all primitive peoples, of deserting a house after there has been a death in it, on account of the belief that the house is haunted by the spirit of the deceased.

your keffiyi is of silk, and its 3akal is Grecian; Your keffiyi is of silk, and its 3akal is of two materials. I wept for you until my eves were blinded. L. 3: The keffiyi is a head-dress consisting of a square piece of cotton or silk, folded diagonally. It is kept in place by the sakal, which is much like a piece of rope, going twice around the top of the head. L. 4: حتّى is pronounced either keptta or hitta.

Oh (Dr.) Post, perform on him the operation, and let the chest take in air.

Post performed for me the operation, and removed for me two ribs from inside.

They brought a branding-iron and said, "Oh poor man, brand yourself."

What will the branding avail,

if the disease is inside?

The first line is the direct utterance of the singer, who was the wife of the deceased. The rest of the song is supposed to be quoted from the deceased. As a cure for diseases of all kinds, branding is extensively employed by the natives of Syria. The branding is performed either with a hot iron, or a glowing rag, tightly rolled up. One of the most common places of branding is the top of the head.

Oh star of the morning, peep out and go back to God; give my greetings to my children, by the majesty of God;

Greet them and say to them that we have been separated, but God will gather us together. Oh star of the morning, move on in the heavens, move on.

and see for me where my beloved ones went,

And see for me where they put their burdens.

The heart is darker than indigo at their departure.

I brought them up as delicate silk worms:

and gave them to drink from my palm and from my two arms.

When they grew older, I said, "Happiness has come to me." The Raven of Death took them, and left me, the sad one.

Death branded me instead of one brand, two: two brands on my eyebrow and two on my eye.

The brand on my eyebrow, oh people, I have soothed, only the brand on my eye pained me,

Oh worm of the grave, oh red and harsh one, do not eat the hands of my children, and unfasten the buttons of their clothing.

You will make miserable their mother, and will destroy their houses.

PROVERBS.

Unless the contrary is indicated, the numbers in the references refer to the numbers of the proverbs in the collections eited.

48.

ما بيقرقع في الدست الله العضام.

ma bīknrkis fī'd-dist illn'l-sadām.

"Nothing rattles in the kettle except the bones."

The most useless people are the only ones who do much talking. عظام for عضام.

Cf. Bauer 2, Landberg 65, Tallqvist 166.

الديك الغيم من تحت الله يصيم.

id-dīk il-fahīh min taht immū yiṣīh.

"The clever cock crows from under his mother."

Clever people show their cleverness when they are young.

udrub il-həmiri sala 'l-hait iza ma lizkit byilzuk nuşsha.

"Throw the leaven on the wall; if it does not stick, half of it will stick."

Although we may not gain all that we desire, by trying we shall at least gain something.

Instead of the last two words, I also have the variation مطرحها bīsallim mvṭráḥha, "it will show the place (where it hit)."

Cf. Burckhardt 255, Green 33, Harfouch p. 321, *Kallius 244, Jewett 41.

كلّ عنزه معلّقه بكرعوبها.

kull sanzi msallaka bi-kersûbha.

"Every she-goat is suspended by her (own) feet."

As every goat is hung up in the market by her own feet, so every one must succeed or fail according to his own efforts.

Cf. Barthélemy 79, Burckhardt 545, Burton 23, Freytag II p. 312 and p. 331, Harfouch p. 330, Landberg 72, Socin 434.

84.

ما عنده كبير الا الجمل.

mất jihī wisteráhna minnū rijis kál sphhik bil-hêr yá háltī.

"Jiḥi died and we were rid of him. He returned and said, 'May your morning be rich in gifts, oh my maternal aunt."

Used when something of which we thought we were well rid, comes back unexpectedly to trouble us still more. صبحك باخير is one of the ordinary morning greetings. The reply is to repeat the greeting in the same form, or to say يسعد صباحك yissad spbāhak.

Cf. the story of Jihī, No. 108.

مداراة المتخلّق صعبه.

medārāt il-mithplliķ sasbi.

"To treat the irascible man with courtesy is difficult."

89.

سوّاق جمل ومستعجل لا يصير.

sauwák jamal ű-mistasjil lá yişír.

"To be the driver of a camel and a hurrier is not possible."

Used if a person tries to hurry something which cannot be hurried.

حساب الحقل ما طلع على حساب البيدر.

hisáb il-hokl ma tulis sala hisáb il-baidar.

"The measuring in the field is not the amount at the measuring at the threshing-floor."

Comparable to our proverb, "Don't count your chickens before they're hatched."

Cf. Burton 84, Einsler 45, Jewett 55 and 117.

nezzil ibnak sala's-sûk ü-šûf mîn yirâfik.

"Take your son to the market-place, and see who associates (with him)."

A man is known by his companions.

Cf. Barthélemy 90, Landberg 154.

STORIES.

The following stories are in the dialect of the Christians of Beirût.

97.

هرون الرشيد طلب من ابو النوّاس ان يعطيه عزر اقبح من زنب. ابو النوّاس تخبّی تحت الدرج. بعدين مرق الملك. ابو النوّاس قرص الملك في اجره. الملك طلّع وقال شو هادا يا ابو النوّاس. قال لا تواخزني يا مولاي انا فتكرتك الملكة زبيده. قال له الملك هادا عزر اقبح من زنب.

Herûn ir-Rašîd asked Abu 'n-Nuwâs to give him an excuse worse than a crime. Abu 'n-Nuwâs hid under the staircase. Later the king passed. Abu 'n-Nuwâs pinched the king in his leg. The king looked around and said, "What's this, oh Abu 'n-Nuwâs?" He said, "Excuse me, (lit. Do not find fault with me) my lord, I thought you were Queen Zbêdi." The king said to him, "That is an excuse worse than a crime."

The King Herûn ir-Rašîd said to a man, "If you will sleep on the roof for the whole night, I will give you five hundred pounds, on condition that you will not warm yourself." It was a night of bitter cold. The man slept. When the light appeared, the man went to the king. The king said to him, "What did you see in the night?" He answered, "I did not see anything except a lamp from afar." The king said, "The condition has been broken." He did not give the man any- 5 thing.

Abu 'n-Nuwâs was present. The next day, he said to the man, "Will you give me half of it, if I will get the reward for you?" The man said, "Yes." Abu 'n-Nuwâs went to the king. He said to him, "To-day will you take lunch with me, you and the soldiers?" The king said, "Good."

Abu 'n-Nuwâs left and said to his wife, "Prepare for me food." He took the food and went outside and hung the kettle 10 on the tree. (Meanwhile) the king was waiting for the food. He said to the soldiers, "I am hungry." He looked and saw the kettle hanging on the tree. He said, "What's this, oh Abu 'n-Nuwâs, how will the food be cooked if the food is high up, and the fire beneath?" Abu 'n-Nuwâs said, "How would the man warm himself if he saw the light from afar?" The king said, "The right is with you, oh Abu 'n-Nuwâs." He ordered 15 the soldiers to eall the man and caused five hundred pounds to be given to him. Abu 'n-Nuwâs took half, and the man took half.

Abu 'n-Nuwâs went to the King Herûn ir-Rašîd. He said to him, "Give me permission to take a donkey from every man afraid of his wife." One day the king was sitting in his palace. He looked from the window and saw dust rising. Abu 'n-Nuwâs was coming and with him many donkeys. The king said to him, "What's this, oh Abu 'n-Nuwâs?" Abu 'n-Nuwâs said, "Oh my lord, you permitted me to take a donkey from every 5 man afraid of his wife; and as I was searching I saw a very beautiful woman, and desired her for you." The king said to him, "Hush, hush, hush, the Queen Zbêdi will hear you; there she is behind the screen." Then Abu 'n-Nuwâs said, "Give me two donkeys; you are the king, and were afraid of the queen. From the people I took one donkey, from you two."

Once Herûn ir-Rašîd had a hundred eggs given to a hundred men, and placed them on chairs and said to them, "Presently Abu 'n-Nuwâs will come. I shall say to you, 'Every one must lay an egg.'" Later Abu 'n-Nuwâs came and sat with them. The king said, "I wish every one of you to lay an egg." Every one, except Abu 'n-Nuwâs, laid an egg. Then Abu 'n-Nuwâs was afraid of the king, and was perplexed what he should do. He 5 began to crow like a cock. The king said to him, "What's this, oh Abu 'n-Nuwâs?" Abu 'n-Nuwâs said, "Oh my lord, do not a hundred hens want at least one cock?" The king was pleased with Abu 'n-Nuwâs, and caused a present to be given him.

The Devil came to the Frank, and saw him blowing with his mouth on his cooked food in the summer. The Devil said to him, "What are you doing?" The Frank said, "I am blowing on the food." Afterwards the Devil came in the winter. and saw the Frank blowing on his hands, to make them warm. The Devil said to him, "What are you doing?" He replied, "I am blowing on my hands to get warm." Then the Devil said: "The Frank has two breaths, one for summer, and one for 5 winter; I want to rob him of his clothing." He said to the Frank, "(If) you will carry me, I will carry you." The Frank said to him, "You shall sing a song, and I will sing a song." Then the Devil mounted and rode on the Frank, and sung his song. Then he finished, and the Frank mounted and rode on the Devil and began to sing, "Tiri lem tiri lem," and he did not finish for the whole length of the road. He caught the Devil, put him in a bottle, and closed it on him with the cork; tîri lem tîri lem. The Frank conquered the Devil. 10

There was a king, who asked the vizîr to shave him. vizîr said, "I am afraid of cutting you." The king said, "Give me a candle and matches." The vizîr gave them to him. The king lighted the candle, and began to burn his beard. Above, his beard began to burn, and below, his hand. Then he said to the vizîr, "How stupid I am! I will give you a leave of seven days to find a man more stupid than I." The vizîr 5 took money and departed. He came to a jar-maker. vizîr) had many books with him. He said to the jar-maker, "I will see your future." He opened the books, and began to read. He said, "Come early to-morrow, and you will find five hundred piastres on the table." The following day, the jar-maker found five hundred piastres. The vizîr said to him, "Come again to-morrow, and you will find a thousand piastres." He came the next day, and found a thousand piastres. The jar-maker 10 said to the vizîr, "I beg of you to tell me how you know." The vizîr replied, "That does not concern you. Come to-mor-

Eat as much as you can, and when the morning star rises, you will die." The following day, he came and found a thousand and five hundred piastres, and departed and bought food with all the money. He began to eat, until he could not 15 move. He said to his wife, "See for me whether the star has risen." She told him, "It has risen." He said to her, "Go before the elders, and say to them, 'My husband has died.'" The elders came, and washed him, and took him to the cemetery. He spoke not a word. The king was sitting in the window and watching everything. The vizîr instructed a woman to stand on the road; she began to curse and say, "Praise be to God that he who has died is the jar-maker, (who was) an elder. May 20 his house be destroyed; may God make his grave deep, and may his life not return." The jar-maker replied, "Were I not dead, I would rise against you!" There were two brothers who had a fig-tree. One said to the other, "Remain and guard the fig-tree, and I will go out as a servant." The younger brother said, "No." His brother said to him, "Very well, but do not be the servant of a man who has no hair on his face." He answered, "Good."

He went forth, and met a priest with no hair on his face. The priest said, "Will you be a servant with me?" He replied, "No. My brother told me not to be a servant for one who has no hair on his face." Then he went on further, and 5 the priest overtook him. The boy thought that all people were priests, and were without hair on their faces. He said to the priest, "Will you take me as a servant?" He said, "Come, but on condition that the one who shall be angry with the other shall have a strip of skin cut off between his eyes (lit. he (the second) shall cut a strip from between his (the first's) eyes)." The boy said, "Very well."

The priest said to him, "Take the bitch and the donkey and this wheat and this bread. You will eat the barley bread; feed 10 the bitch with the wheat bread." He did this, and became dizzy from the barley bread, and sowed only a half midd. The priest scolded him. The boy was angry. The priest said to him, "Are you angry?" He replied, "Of course I am." Then (the priest) cut a piece out from between (the boy's) eyes. He went to his brother, and his brother said to him, "Did I not tell you to stay here as watchman of the tree? Now do you stay and guard it, and I will go out as a servant."

Jihi went to the house of the priest. He said to him, "Will you take me as a servant?" He replied, "Enter, but on condition that the one who is angry with the other shall have a piece cut from between his eyes." He said to him, "Very well." The priest said to him, "Take the donkey, and plant these six midds of wheat; the bitch will guide you. You will feed her with wheat bread, and you will eat barley bread, and when you 20 have finished, you will bring a little fire-wood on the donkey." He went, and ate the wheat bread, and beat the bitch till he killed her; and he took two sticks of wood, and stuck them into the donkey's back, and killed him; and he buried the wheat in the ground, and went to the house.

The priest said to him, "Where is the bitch?" He replied, "Because I ate the wheat bread, she was cross, and I killed her; are you angry?" He answered, "No." Then he said, "Where is the donkey?" Jihi replied, "You told me to 25 bring wood, and gave me nothing on which to put the wood; I stuck in a stick here, and a stick here. The donkey died. Are you angry?" He said to him, "No."

Then he went to the priestess. He said to her, "It is evident that this (fellow) is more of a devil than we are." Then (the priest) told him, "Take this boy outside." He took him. Jiḥi said to the boy, "If you do anything, or if you do not do anything, I shall kill you." The boy began to cry. The priest 30 went out. He said to Jiḥi, "What is the matter with him?" He answered, "He is crying." The priest told him, "Strike him a blow with the palm of the hand." Jiḥi struck him a blow, and killed him. The priest said to him, "Where is the boy, oh Jiḥi?" He replied, "Oh my master, you told me to give him a blow. I beat him, and he died; are you angry?" He told him, "No."

The priest said to her, "It is evident, oh priestess, that Jihi is going to cut a piece from between my eyes." Then he said 35 to Jihi, "Take the yoke of oxen out into the sun." He took out the yoke of oxen, and cut it into pieces, and threw it on to the roof. The priest said to him, "Where is the yoke of oxen?" He replied, "I took it up on to the roof, for it to be in the sun." The priest said to him, "How did you take it up?" He replied, "I cut it into pieces; are you angry, oh my master?" He answered, "No."

Afterwards the priest went to the priestess, and said to her, "Rise, kill the chickens, and prepare them as food for the 40 journey." Jihi was listening on the roof. He descended, and got into the box and ate all the chickens.

At midnight the priest said to the priestess, "Rise, that we may go." He lifted the box, and set out. He said to her, "Oh priestess, it seems that this box is heavy." She said to him, "I filled it with chicken and bread." They reached a point near to the shore of the sea. He said to her, "Sit, oh priestess." They opened the box, and found Jihi. They said, 45 "Yi, are you here?" He said to them, "Yes, I had no heart to leave you; are you angry, oh our father?" He told him, "No." Jihi went to take some exercise (lit. smell the air). The priest said to the priestess, "Now we shall sleep; Jihi will come and will sleep with us. When he is asleep, we will throw him into the sea." Jiḥi knew what they were going to do. He stole the priestess's veil, and slept near the priest. The priest awoke, and thought Jiḥi was the priestess. Then he said 50 to her, "Rise, oh priestess, that we may throw Jiḥi (into the sea)." The priest and Jiḥi began to push the priestess, and threw her into the sea. Then the priest said, "Haiy, I am happy; we have got rid of Jiḥi!" Jiḥi said to him, "No, we have got rid of the priestess; are you angry, oh our father?" He replied, "Of course I am angry! You killed the bitch and the donkey and the boy and the oxen, and ate the chickens, and 55 I was not angry; but now I am dying of anger." Jiḥi cut a strip from between the priest's eyes, and departed.

L. 1: واحد is pronounced either wahad or wahid.

L. 7: بتحطني is pronounced bithuṭṭnī, bithoṭṭnī and bithuṭṭnī.

L. 28: خورقع, which I have translated "priestess," means here "wife of the priest."

Jiḥi's mother said to him, "Go and work." He said to her, "At what shall I work? I do not know anything." She said to him, "Tie up (rob) the road, and bring some money." Then he took the sauce-pan, and went and sold it, and bought a long rope; and went and tied the road from one side to the other, and departed. The muleteers came, and untied the rope, and departed. Then he said to her, "Oh my mother, I tied up the road, and they took the rope." She said to him, "What 5 rope?" He said to her, "The rope with which you told me to tie up the road." She said to him, "I did not tell you to tie up the road with a rope; but I meant for you to kill some rich person, and take money from him."

He returned to the road, and saw the judge passing. He took a stone, and hit him. It struck his head, and killed him. Jihi took him, and went to his mother. He said to her, "Oh my mother, I have killed the judge for you." She said to him, 10 "May your house be destroyed! If the sultân knows, he will kill us." She went and killed a he-goat.

Afterwards (the members of) the government were waiting for the judge to come. They went to his house, and asked, "Where is the judge?" They said to them, "We have not seen him for two days." Then the sultan began to make proclamation, "To him who has seen the judge, and will give me information about him, I will give a hundred pounds." Jihi said to him, "I killed him and threw him in the well." 15 His mother had thrown the goat in the well, and buried the judge. The soldiers came with Jihi to see the judge. His mother said to them, "My son is crazy." He said to them, "I killed him; there he is in the well." They said to him, "Go down, and bring him." He descended, and took hold of the ear of the goat. He said to them, "Had the judge long ears?" They said to him, "Not very." Then he took hold of the horn, and said to them, "Had the judge horns?" They said 20 to him, "No; it is true that you are crazy." His mother said to them, "Did I not tell you that my son is erazy?"

There was a king who had a daughter. Every day she used to sit in the window, and concerning every man whom she saw, if he was clean, she said, "That is from his wife"; and if he was dirty, she said, "That is from his wife." At length her father became angry with her. He said to the vizir, "Take her, and remove her." The vizir took her, and began to walk and walk, he and she, until they reached the vicinity of the house of a man named Hasan the Lazy. He was a very strong 5 young man, but very lazy. If he wished to drink, he said, "Oh my mother, give me to drink"; if he wished to eat, "Oh my mother, feed me." The vizir placed the daughter of the king there.

After two or three days, she entered the garden. There were many pomegranates. She broke off a long stick of pomegranate wood; returned, and began to beat Hasan. She said to him, "Go and work." He answered, "I do not want to." Then 10 she beat him, and said to him, "Take a rope." He went to work as a porter. The first day he worked for two piastres. He came (home) and said to his lady, "I have worked for two piastres." She said to him, "Well done!" He began to work every day, and to bring more money.

Then, one day, there was a rich man going on the pilgrimage to Mekka. He said, "Oh Hasan, will you go with me?" He replied, "(Wait) until I ask my lady." He went and asked his lady. She said to him, "Of course, go with him." As 15 they were going along, they saw a well, in which there was water. They said, "Who will descend, to bring us a little water?" Hasan the Lazy descended. He saw a man with a female slave sitting on his right, and a very beautiful lady sitting on his left. Hasan the Lazy looked (at them). The man said to him, "What is the matter with you, that you are looking?" He replied, "Nothing. 'I love my dear one, were he a black slave.'" The man said to him, "Well done! Take this 20 key, and open the garden. Pick a basketful of pomegranates." He picked a basketful, and sent it to his lady and his mother. They put it on the shelf and said, "Leave it until Hasan comes."

After some days, the king's daughter said, "Oh my lady, bring (the pomegranates) and we will break open one." When she broke it open, she found a diamond. Then she went to the market, and sold it, and came and bought everything she wanted, and was happy. Then she said to her lady, "Let us 25 break open another." She found another diamond. She went and sold it, and bought a palace and furniture and decorated it, and she bought slaves and carriages and prepared clothes for Hasan.

Afterward her father said to the vizir, "Oh Vizir of the Age, I wish to know what has become of my daughter. Come then. let us dress like the dervishes, and go to search for her." The vizir said to him, "I placed her in the house of Hasan the 30 Lazy." They began to walk and walk, until they reached the village of Hasan the Lazy. The vizir asked, "Where is the house of Hasan the Lazy?" They said to him, "Yî, Hasan has become very rich, and it is all from his lady." They guided them to the palace, which was large, and had in it slaves, and people, and servants. They looked up, and the daughter of the king saw them. The sultan wished to be in disguise, but 35 his daughter knew him. She said, "Welcome, oh my father." Then her father embraced her, and began to kiss her. He said to her, "Where is your husband?" She replied to him, "I am still a virgin, and Hasan is on the pilgrimage." When Hasan returned, they wrote her marriage-contract, and married her to Hasan, and she and her father and her husband lived (happily) until they died. She said, "You see (lit. you saw), oh my father, everything is from the woman!" 40

I. 12: مرتع (classical مراته), here translated by the word "lady," ordinarily means "woman" or "wife." The present use, where the king's daughter is referred to as مرة حسين before she has been married to him, is unusual.

L. 16: The ordinary pronunciation of \longrightarrow is between mai and moi. Among the Bedawins I have heard $m\ddot{a}$.

L. 20: Cf. the proverb with No. 50.

There was a recluse at the house of a rich man, who every day gave him a little clarified butter and a little honey. One day the recluse was sitting on his mat, collecting the butter and the honey in a jar. He said, "I shall sell a jar of this butter and honey, and buy a she-lamb, and this she-lamb will bear another, and this one another, until they multiply. Then I shall sell them, and shall be rich. I shall marry the daughter of such- 5 and-such a merchant, and I shall have such a wedding as there never was before; and I shall invite the merchants and the nobles, and I shall have wedding-feasts. And afterwards, I shall have a son; and when he grows up, I shall teach him philosophy and engineering; and if he is disobedient to me, I shall take this stick, and beat him with it." He raised his stick to beat his son with it. The stick struck the jar of honey and broke it, and the butter and the honey fell on his beard. 10

There was once a certain king of the Arabs. He took his people and went to the desert; and as he was going, he saw a wild ass, which he followed. His horse became separated from the company. Then rain began to fall heavily (lit. then the world began to be very rainy). He saw a house, entered, and asked shelter in it. The owner of the house said to his wife, "By the appearance of this man, he is a person of wealth. With what shall we serve him?" She replied, "We have nothing except this sheep. Kill it and roast it, and I will go to 5 knead this bit of flour." They did this, and offered the food to the guest, and he slept that night at their house. The next day, when he was about to mount, he said to them, "I am king in-Nasmân; ask for what you wish." The man said to him, "Some day, I will come (to your court)." After a time they became very poor. His wife said to him, "Oh man, the king promised that he would give us something. Go and see."

The king in-Nasmân got drunk one day. He had two friends with him. He ordered their death. The next day he asked, "Where are So-and-so and So-and-so?" They told him, "You ordered their death." The king was greatly grieved, and made two columns for them, and appointed a day of happiness and a day of sorrow. On the day of happiness and on the day of sorrow the king used to sit between the two columns. Whoever came to him on the day of happiness, the king would give him presents; and the one who came to him on the day of sorrow the king would kill, and paint the two columns with his blood. 15 It happened that the day in which the man came to him was the day of sorrow. The king was greatly grieved, and said to him, "Could you not find a day to come except to-day?" He answered, "I accept the condition, but I wish some one to stand security for me." Then he turned to a man whose name was Šēbân, and said to him, "Will you not stand security for me?" He did not accept. Then a man whose name was Karâdi arose and said, "I will stand security for you." The 20 king said to him, "For how long?" He replied, "For a year." Then the king gave him (the man) five hundred she-camels, and he departed to his people.

The time for the day of sorrow came. The king said to Karâdi, "The time has come. If Henzela were intending to come, he would have arrived," and the king was very eager that he should not come. The next day the king mounted, and sat between the two columns, and asked that Karâdi should be killed. All the people said to him, "No, it is not lawful until 25 the end of his day." And as they were talking, they saw dust. The king said to the executioner, "Kill him." The people said, "No, until we see who that is; it may be Henzela." After some minutes he arrived. Then the king was greatly grieved, and said, "What brought you, oh Henzela?" He replied, "The fulfillment of the promise." The king said to him, "Who taught you the fulfillment of a promise?" He answered, "My religion." He said to him, "What is your 30 religion?" He replied, "Christianity." The king said to him, "Explain it to me." He explained it, and the king and his whole tribe became Christians, and he destroyed the two columns, and gave presents to Henzela and to Karâdi, and said to them, "I do not know who was more generous, he who kept his promise, or he who stood security."

A fisherman came to the king of Persia, and offered him a fish. The king gave him a thousand dinars. The queen Širîn was sitting beside the king. When the fisherman left, she said to the king, "That is a great deal: a thousand dinars as the price of the fish." He said to her, "I have but now given them to him; how shall I take them from him?" The queen said to him, "Wait a little, I will take them from him." He said to her, "How?" She replied, "I shall ask him, 'What is the sex of this fish, male or female?' If he says 'Male,' I shall say, 5 'The king will not eat a male,' and if he says, 'Female,' I shall say, 'The king will not eat a female.'" She called the man, and asked him, "What is the sex of this fish, male or female?" He thought a little, and said to her, "It is a hermaphrodite, neither male nor female." The king was very much pleased. He gave the man a thousand dinars. One fell. The man picked it up, and put it in the bag. The queen said to the 10 king, "Did you see how very selfish he was? A dinar fell; he picked it up and took it." Then the king called him and said to him, "Are not two thousand dinars enough for you, that you took the dinar, and did not leave it for one of the servants?" He answered, "I am under your orders." Then he added, "Because the king's likeness is on it I was afraid that some one would step on it." The king was pleased with his cleverness, and gave him a thousand dinars more. The fish 15 cost the king three thousand dinars. He said that one should never in his life listen to the advice of women.

There was a king who had a single son, who saw a poor girl. He said, "Oh my father, I wish this girl." His father said to him, "No, I am the king; I will not take a poor girl for you." Then the boy became very sick. The physicians said to his father, "It is better if you will marry him to this girl; otherwise your son will die." Then the king went to the girl's father and asked the girl of him. Her father said to him, "I will not give her to you unless your son knows a trade." He replied, "My 5 son will be king, what does he want of a trade?" "I will not marry her to anyone who does not know a trade; but if you wish to take her by the sword, I am your slave and under your orders." The king said to him, "No, I will not take her by the sword, but I will ask my son if he wishes to learn a trade." He went and asked his son, who said, "Yes, I wish to learn the working of crystals."

One day he said to his father, "Freight a ship for me, I wish 10 to travel to Constantinople." His father loaded a ship for him, and as they were travelling, the ship was wrecked. Some were drowned and some were saved. From the number, the boy was saved on a bit of wood. He reached the land, but was very hungry. He arrived at a work-shop, and stood near the door. He said to the owner of the shop, "Will you take me at your shop?" He replied, "You do not see the nature of this delicate 15 work. How will you know how to do this work?" He said, "Take me as a servant. I will sweep the shop, but for my food."

One day the king had a goblet of very fine crystal. It was broken. The king sent for the owner of the work-shop, and said to him, "You must mend this goblet." He took it and was very sad. He went to the shop, and was telling that the king demanded of him that he should mend the goblet. There was 20 no one who knew how to do it. The boy said to him, "Oh my master, give me a candle and two loaves (of bread) so that I may dine, and close the shop on me. You will come in the morning and find the goblet ready." He did this. The owner of the shop came the next morning, and saw the goblet done excellently. He took it and went to the king, who was very much pleased. He said, "I wish another." The owner of the 25 shop came and informed the boy, who said, "Give me a candle and two loaves." The morning of the following day the owner of the shop came and saw the goblet ready. Then he took it, and went running to the king. The king said to him, "I wish still another." He returned and informed the boy, who said, "Good; give me a candle and two loaves." He shut the shop 30 and departed. The boy wrote on the goblet,

"Oh plenty, be plentiful, and increase if there is not plenty; the goat will take the money, and the goblet is the work of my hand."

Later the king saw this. He sent for the owner of the workshop, and said to him, "Tell me who did the work on these goblets." He said, "Oh my lord, may your head be kept in safety, I (did it)." The king said to him, "Speak the truth, or I will cut off your head." He told him, saying, "I have a poor boy who did the work on them." The king sent for the 35 boy and said to him, "Oh boy, tell me where you learned this trade." He replied, "I am a king's son, and learned it in my country, and the goblet my father presented to you." The king said to him, "Is that true?" He answered, "Yes." The king wanted to kill the owner of the shop, and to give everything to the boy. The boy said to him, "No, my lord, I ate bread and salt in his house; do me a favor and let him live; but I beg of 40 you, send me to my father." The king sent him, and sent presents with him, and the owner of the shop was saved for the sake of the boy. We learn two things from this story: the covenant of the bread and salt, and that if one is rich, it is no shame for his son to learn a trade.

Once there were three robbers in a wine shop. The people who were drinking there departed. The robbers said among themselves, "At night we shall go and steal the treasure of the sultan." Herûn ir-Rašîd was disguised, and sitting in a corner. He rose and said to them, "I wish to go with you;" but he was disguised, and they did not know him. He said to them, "Take me with you or I shall tell (of the plot)." They said, "Good." They asked one, "What is your business?" He said to them, "I know what the dogs say when they bark." They said to the second, "What is your business?" He said, "I carry seventy kuntar (about 17½ tons), and am not wearied." They said to the third, "And you, what do you do?" He said to them, "I have a magnet with which I extract all the nails and screws without noise." They said to the king, "What do you do?" He said to them, "I help those in trouble." They said, "Good. Start, (lit. walk) that we may be on the way 10 (lit. that we may go)." They started and left (the wine shop), and as they were going, they heard dogs barking.

They said to him who understood the barking of dogs, "What are they saying?" He said to them, "They are saying that the king is with us." Herûn ir-Rašíd said to him, "Keep still, I beg of you." The king was very angry, and feared that they would know him, and he said to the man, "Will the king come to steal his own treasure?" Afterwards they reached the palace of the king. The dogs began to bark very much. Then they said to him who knew the language of the 15 dogs, "What are they saying?" He said to them, "I told you that they are saying that the king is with us." The king was very angry, and said to him, "Did I not tell you not to say again that the king is with us? Why should I come to steal my own treasure?"

They went up (on to the palace). They said to the owner of the magnet, "You extract the screws and the nails." He extracted them; and they said to the man who could carry a great deal, "Your turn has come." Herûn ir-Rašîd said to 20 them, "I shall precede you to such-and-such a place, so that no one will catch us on the road." He departed, brought the police, and caught the robbers as they were going out, and put them in prison.

Then the next day Herûn ir-Rašîd went to the court. He said to them, "Bring the robbers here." He said to the first, "What is your business?" He answered, "I understand what the dogs say." He said to the second, "What do you know?" 25 He replied, "I extract with the magnet." He said to the third, "What is your business?" He replied, "I carry a heavy load." Then they said to him, "Your business is the relief of troubles. What do you want of a trouble greater than this (of ours)?" He said to them, "This time I have pardoned you," and he exiled them. He said to them, "If I see you in this town, I shall kill you." They wished that his gifts might increase, and departed.

There was a sultan who had forty boys. They saw all the sons of the vizirs and the sons of the nobles married in the month of Šasbān. Then the eldest son said to his brothers, "Come, let us isolate ourselves, because our father has not married us. Now we shall all dress in red and shall sit in our rooms. When our father comes and asks us why we are angry, we shall say to him, 'All the sons of the nobles have been married; and you will not marry us, who are the sons of the sultan.'" In the evening their father came. He asked, "Where are the boys?" The slaves said to him, "They are dressed in red as a sign of anger." He went to the eldest and said to him, "What is the matter with you, oh my son, that you are angry?" He replied, "I am now fifty years old, and you have not married me." He said to him, "Willingly (would

I marry you), oh my son, but here there are no kings' daughters fit for you." All of them said, "We do not wish kings' daugh-10 ters; we wish forty girls born of the same mother and father." He said, "Good."

They brought forty mules and loaded them with light burdens. but of great value. They set out, and kept on until they reached a cave. Night came. They slept there. The next day they rose to go on a hunt. They left the youngest one to make the food. He wished to kindle a fire. Having no matches, 15 he began to walk, until at sunset he arrived at a wall. He climbed up on it, and then descended. He saw a ladder. He mounted the ladder, and saw a slave carrying a sword, going up to kill the daughters of the sultan. He killed him. Then he saw a second. He killed him, (and continued killing others) to (the number of) twenty. Then he entered the interior. He saw a king's daughter like the moon, sleeping in a bed. Then he entered a second room, and (continued) 20 until (he had entered) thirty-nine. In every room there was a maiden. In the room of the fortieth, he searched, but did not see anyone. He said, "I have found brides for my brothers, but none for myself." He began to search in the room. saw a cradle in the ceiling. He lowered it, and saw a girl the most beautiful of all, with her hair covering her face. He parted it, and then left her and went away.

The father of the maidens came and saw the slaves all lying dead. He asked the servants, "Who did this favor for 25 me, that I may give him whatever he wishes?" The boy had gone to his brothers, and had not told them anything. The king sent a herald to make a proclamation; and in his hand he had a veil. He went the first day and the second day, and the third day the son of the sultan saw him. He said to him. "Give me the veil." He gave it to him. The son of the sultan went to the king and told him (what he had done). The king said to him, "What do you wish that I should give you?" 30 He replied, "I do not wish anything; but we are the sons of the Sultan So-and-so, and we are forty, born of the same mother and father. We want forty brides born of the same mother and father." He answered, "Welcome." The boy sent for his brothers. They came, and saw their brides. When they saw that the youngest was the most beautiful of all, they were envious and wished to kill their brother.

They went to the sultan and said to him, "Because the 35 youngest maiden is the most beautiful of all, you should ask a rich dowry for her." He said to them, "What shall I ask?" They said to him, "The ogre has a bed-cover, which is very fine, made of silk, and very large, and if you fold it, it will become small." The sultan went and said to the boy, "I will not give you my daughter until you bring me the ogre's bed-cover." Hasan said to him, "Good."

He went and gathered many fleas, and ascended to the roof of the ogre's house. He made a hole in it, and threw the 40 fleas on the ogre and the ogress. Then the ogre said to the ogress, "Put the bed-cover outside, so that the fleas may fly away." Then she put it outside. Hasan came and took it. Between the ogre's house and the road, there was an enchanted rock. The ogre saw Hasan taking the bed-cover. Then the ogre said to him, "I beg you, oh Hasan, God keep you, oh Hasan, ask what you wish and I will give it to you." Hasan 45 did not answer. He took the bed-cover and went to the sultan. He said to him, "Now I wish the bride." He replied, "Welcome."

Hasan's brothers came and said to the sultan, "The ogre still has a horse which has no equal." The sultan came and said to Hasan, "I wish also the ogre's horse," He replied. "Good. This affair is not your doing, but the doing of my brothers." He went to the ogre's house. He hid under the belly of the horse. The horse was fastened by seven staples, 50 He drew out the first staple. The horse neighed. The ogre said to the ogress, "Get up, see who is stealing the horse." She said to him, "Who will dare to steal the horse?" Then Hasan pulled out the second staple. The horse neighed a second time, louder than the first. The ogre got up to see who was stealing the horse. He searched and found Hasan under the 55 horse's belly. He said to him, "Ah, you have been caught." He took him, tied him, and went to summon all the ogres. He said to his wife, "Knead a great deal of dough." Then she began to knead the dough. Hasan said to her, "Free my hand, so that I may knead in your place." She freed his hand. Then he said to her, "I cannot knead with one hand; free the other for me, and I shall knead better." She freed for him his other hand. He freed his feet and killed her, cooked her, 60 and spread the table. He took the horse and departed. He came to the sultan and said to him, "Oh Sultan of the Age, if you again ask anything, I shall kill you, and shall kill my brothers," He replied, "No, take your bride."

All of them loaded (the mules) and departed; as they were going, the muleteers said to them, "Do not pass by this road; change it, because over there all the people of the town are 65 enchanted, and became black stones." Then his brothers said, "Make Hasan pass by that road, and let his wife remain with us." The muleteers made a mistake, and caused them to pass by the enchanted city.

The Jew who performed the enchantment saw them, and fell in love with Princess Hisn. He enchanted all of them except her, whom he took as his bride. She did not know that her husband was alive and he did not know that she was alive. 70 Afterward, her husband was in the garden. He looked and saw Princess Hisn in the window. He sent (a message) by the slaves, and said to her, "I am alive; but ask the Jew where is his soul, that you and it may be company for each other during the day."

In the evening the Jew came, She said to him, "I beg of you, tell me where your soul is, so that I and it may be company for each other during the day." He said to her, "In the wooden lock of the door." She put a bunch of flowers on 75 the door, and began to act as though she were talking with it. The Jew came in the evening, and saw the door decorated. said to her, "What! Are you crazy?" She said to him, "I beg of you, where is your soul?" He said to her, "In the broom." She began to smile (lit. laugh) at him, so that he would think that she loved him. The third day she said to him. "I beg of you, tell me where your soul is." He said to her, "My soul is inside of some cotton in a little box in the foot of 80 a lame gazelle." She said to him, "What shall I do to get it?" He replied, "By means of three hairs from my beard." She took the three hairs, and the next day gave them to her husband. He burned the first hair. A giant appeared, who said to him, "What do you wish?" He said to him, "You must take me to such-and-such a place." He took him. He saw a lame gazelle. He shot her, and removed her foot, and saw in it 85 He opened the little box and saw in it some a little box. cotton.

The Jew said to his wife, "Ah, I am going to die," Hasan burned the second hair. A giant appeared. He said to Hasan, "What do you wish?" He said to him, "I wish you to take me back to the town in which the Jew is." He put him on his shoulders and flew to the town of the Jew. Hasan took out the cotton, and said to the Jew, "See, I have your soul, 90 Remove the enchantment from my brothers, or your soul (will remain) with me." The Jew took water and sprinkled it. All of them returned (to the forms of) men, as they were; and all the people of the enchanted town: the blacksmiths and the carpenters, and everyone (returned) to his trade. Then Hasan took the cotton and pulled it to pieces; and all the brothers departed to their father. Hasan told his story to his father. His father kept Hasan with him, and made his brothers live in another town. 95

And you in your breast did enfold it.

The Modern Pronunciation of Coptic in the Mass.—By J. DYNELEY PRINCE, Ph.D., Professor in Columbia University, New York City.

THE name Copt (ΓΥΠΤΙΟC = Αἰγύπτιος, Arabic Qibt, pl. Aqbát, vulgar Qŭbăt) is restricted at the present day to the Eutychian or Monophysite sect which for centuries has formed the national Christian Church of Egypt. This population, which numbers approximately five hundred thousand, represents the most direct descendants of the ancient Egyptians, because for religious reasons the Copts have practically abstained from intermarriage with all alien elements. There is no ground whatever for the belief that the ancestors of these people were foreign immigrants who embraced Christianity after the Mohammedan conquest of Egypt in 640 A. D. At present the Copts are found in the greatest numbers in the towns of Negâdeh, Luxor, Esneh, Dendera, Girgeh, Tanta, Assiût and Akhmîm, where they are nearly all engaged in commerce of every description. In fact, they may be said to resemble in this respect the Armenians of Turkey and the Jewish communities of other lands.

The Coptic language has been dead as a spoken idiom since the end of the seventeenth century A. D. About 1680 A. D. the Dutch traveller Van Sleb mentioned as an extraordinary fact that he had met an aged man who was still able to speak Coptic. The language must have perished as a vernacular, no doubt dying out very gradually, between the fifteenth and the seventeenth Christian centuries, because the Arabic historian Magrîzî remarked in the fifteenth century that the Coptic women and children of Upper Egypt in his time spoke Coptic almost exclusively, although they also knew Greek perfectly. can be no doubt, however, that Coptic had begun to take a secondary place even before the time of Magrîzî, for, as early as 1393. Coptic manuscripts had marginal notes in Arabic, which seems to show that the latter language, even at that period, was recognized as the dominant idiom and had come into very general use.

Although the chief ancient dialects of Coptic were five in number, we have to reckon in the present treatise only with two, viz. the Sahidic and the Boheiric. The Upper Egyptian linguistic variations all succumbed before the powerful influence of the Sahidic idiom, which was at first spoken near Thebes and eventually was used as a vernacular from Minyeh to the Nubian border. In the same way the Boheiric, which was originally the language of the Western Delta, i. e. of Alexandria and its environs, soon became the tongue of all Lower Egypt. This dialect eventually displaced even its powerful rival, the Sahidic, and it remains to-day, all over Egypt, the idiom of the official church service-books, gospels, etc. The student of modern Coptic pronunciation, therefore, has to deal with Boheiric, but often only orthographically, for, as will be shown in the following article, the local peculiarities of utterance have by no means died out.

In this connection should be mentioned the truly excellent work of my friend, Mr. Claudius Labîb, professor in the Orthodox Patriarchal School in Cairo, who is an enthusiast in Coptic He has actually succeeded in teaching a considerable number of young people of both sexes to use the Boheiric Contic as a school vernacular, i. e., to understand lectures delivered in it by himself and others, especially Wahby Bey, the head-master of the school; and has enabled his pupils to converse with ease in Coptic on all ordinary subjects. Labib has accomplished this very largely by the establishment of a Coptic press, whence he has issued a number of text-books, the most important of which are his Coptic-Arabic dictionary (the third volume is now in preparation), and a series of primers to teach the Arabic-speaking student to express himself in Coptic. Besides these, he is at present engaged in issuing a Coptic edition of the gospels as they are read in the churches. Since the great majority of modern Coptic priests are in no sense scholars and do not even make a pretence of mastering their religious language grammatically, but are content to read the mass and gospels ceremonially in a parrot-like fashion assisted by a parallel Arabic translation, the importance of Labîb's efforts at education in this direction can hardly be overestimated. He cannot of course succeed, as he fondly hopes to do, in reviving a language which has been dead for centuries, any more than the enthusiastic Cornishmen who have just founded a society in England for the revival of their ancient national tongue can ever have success. Labîb's work, however, can, and no doubt will, stimulate among his somewhat lethargic co-religionists, priests and laymen, a desire to obtain a real knowledge of the literature of their ancient tongue. The present Orthodox Patriarch, Cyril the Fifth, himself an excellent Coptic scholar and a most enlightened man, is doing all in his power to further the study of Coptic in every school in Egypt under the aegis of his church.

Hitherto it has been customary to regard the modern pronunciation of Coptic in the church services as being merely a slovenly corruption of the original utterances of the language, and consequently as being of little or no importance from a phonetic point of view. No idea could be more erroneous. In spite of the ignorance of the priesthood, they have for ceremonial reasons been at great pains to hand down the traditionally correct pronunciation of their religious language. Indeed, so different to the intonation of Arabic is the tone of the Coptic as uttered by the priests of to-day that no one can reasonably assert that Arabic has had any influence on the pronunciation of the church language. In short, we still have in the conventional utterances of the mass what seems to be a genuine echo of how the ancient language must have sounded both in Upper and in Lower Egypt: and this, too, in spite of the fact that the idiom of the church is orthographically Boheiric. There can be no doubt that in Upper Egypt the Boheiric is still uttered as if it were Sahidic, i. e. in accordance with the original Sahidic vocalization.

The following table of the various pronunciations of the names of the letters of the alphabet will serve partially to illustrate this undoubted fact.

As will be seen from the above comparison, some latitude exists within the limits of the Sahidic district; a latitude which probably must not be set down to individual carelessness, but may perhaps be regarded as a relic of early dialectic variation. due, possibly, to incomplete assimilation to Sahidic of the primitive local idioms, or to differentiation of the Sahidic itself. Labîb informs me that certain similar variations are noticeable in the Delta. The modern pronunciation peculiar to the Favyûm Oasis also differs from the Cairo style. Indeed, one has only to examine the speech of the Moslem fellâhîn within the borders of Upper Egypt alone, to understand that linguistic variation is a characteristic of the Nile life. Nor is the explanation of this phenomenon far to seek. The villages of the Nile have been until quite recently absolutely separated one from the other: the only means of communication having been the river-highway. chiefly used by the professional boatmen. The average fellah was, and, to a great extent, still is, chained to the soil, enjoying little or no intercourse with his brethren of even the nearest What more natural state of affairs then than the dialectic differentiation which exists very noticeably to-day in the Nile-land? The local conditions, which after all have changed very slightly in the course of centuries, were bound to produce the greatest variation, first in the early language, and subsequently in the idiom of the Arabian conquerors, which slowly but surely supplanted the native speech, but which, no doubt, at once took on just such differentiations as had characterised the earlier Coptic.

The following examples of differences in the modern pronunciation of the Boheiric Church-Coptic were collected by me at Cairo, the present centre of the Delta vocalization, and at Assuân, the southernmost town of the Saîd (Sahîd), or Upper Egypt, respectively. I have thought it best to analyze specimens of current texts, rather than to present comparisons of isolated words. The Assuân text was cantillated by a priest into a phonograph.

From a careful examination of the above specimens of modern Coptic pronunciation, and from the study of further data supplied by Labîb and other Coptic experts, the following phonetic laws seem patent.

A. The Vowels.

The vowels play a most important rôle in Coptic phonetics, as they must have done also in the ancient Egyptian. In fact, there can be little doubt that their original pronunciation in Coptic has had an important effect on the modern Egyptian Arabic vernacular, which differs so considerably from the Arabic idioms of other lands. It has been pointed out by Prätorius, among others, that the system of additional vowels which prevails to-day in the Egyptian Arabic is the result of Coptic influence. There is, indeed, every evidence to show that this is the case, although Prätorius¹ does not state the probable reason for it. It is not because Coptic ever had such a system of purely phonetic intercalary vocalization, as one might gather from his statements, but because the Coptic idiom was extremely rich in vowels,² particularly in final vowels, which gave the tendency to the subsequent ¹ ZDMG. lv. p. 146. For the intercalary vowels in Egyptian Arabic, cf. Spitta, Grammatik des Vulgärarabischen, p. 21; Vollers, Grammar of Modern Arabic, § 20.

² Some Arabic dialects, for example the Moroccan, are vowel-poor, but others, again, have intermediate vowels, like the Egyptian. There can be no doubt, however, that intercalary vowels are more prominent in Egyptian than in any other Arabic idiom.

VOL. XXIII.

Arabic-speaking Egyptians to insert, without reference to grammar, a helping, or furtive, vowel in their present vernacular, whenever a combination of too many consonants should occur. This peculiarity is seen in such Arabic phrases as the following: běssi li 'it is enough for me'; hargi niswān 'ladies' shawls'; šuġli mīn di 'whose work is this?', etc.

- 1. Long and short λ are represented in both Boheiric and Sahidic by â and ä, respectively; thus Caxi = B. sāžī, S. sāyī 'word'; λρχη = B. and S. ärchī (Greek) 'beginning.' The diphthong λγ = av in B. (cf. Mod. Gk. av = af) and āū in S.; e. g. λγωωπ = B. avšōpī, S. āūšōbī 'they have been.' It should be noted, moreover, that λλ was used according to Stern¹ to represent Arabic ε in the words λλλλης Δροτ 'sublimate.' The ε is rapidly disappearing in the present Egyptian Arabic, especially in Upper Egypt, and it may be expected that in the course of a century it will have vanished altogether. In Stern's document λ appears frequently as the equivalent of the Arabic vowel e in the article, i. e. λλ = J el.
- 2. E, which = Boheiric ē, appears generally in Sahidic as ä; thus, ben = B. μĕn, S. μän; etbe = ĕtvē, S. ätwä, etc. It should be observed that n appears in B. as ĕn, but in S. as ni; ef. nbhtq = B. ĕnhttf, S. nthädäf 'in it.' When, however, it is followed by a second n, this is not the case; e. g. nnipomi = B. and S. ĕnnirómt. In the same way n = ĕm in both pronunciations, nπe = B. ĕmpē, S. ĕmbā. It is curious to note that eptwb, the measure of quantity, has become ärdēb in the Arabic vernacular of Egypt. The combination πe ete = B. pē ētē becomes by elision bēdā in Sahidic. In B. the diphthong en invariably pronounced ev, following the analogy of the ¹ Stern, Ztschr. d. ägyptischen Sprache, xxiii. (1885, pp. 104-120), has published a highly interesting fragment of a Coptic treatise on alchemy, in which many Arabic terms denoting metals and chemicals are transliterated in Coptic characters, showing the pronunciation of Arabic in Upper Egypt at quite an early date (not fixed). It is, however, according to Stern, the oldest exact transcription of Semitic sounds.

Neo-Hellenic, whereas it still retains in S. its probable original force ea, pronounced as a true diphthong. A relic of this usage is still seen in the Egyptian Arabic word το δαπέ 'a barn, store-house', from which we find the denominative stem δαματίπ 'to store up.' According to Stern, op. cit., the e-vowel appears for Arabic Alif in the word ΧΕΝΟΥΝ 'brazier' - کانون . This of course represents the flat pronunciation of the Alif, a, so common in modern Syria and Egypt.

- 3. The vowel H differs strangely in Northern and Southern Egypt. The Upper Egyptian vocalization gives it the value d in all native words; thus, NAQXH = B. $n\ddot{a}fki$, S. $n\ddot{a}fka$ 'it was'; NBHTQ = B. Enkitf, S. $nihad\ddot{a}f$ 'in it', etc., but retains the i-value in the Greek ANAPKH = S. $\ddot{a}n\ddot{a}gki$ (B. $\ddot{a}n\ddot{a}gki$). The diphthong HY is pronounced iv in Lower Egypt and aa, like AY, in Upper Egypt. The vowel H is found in Stern, op. cit., representing the Arabic i-vowel; cf. ACCEPNHZ = iv 'arsenic.' The modern Egyptian Arabic word merisi 'southwind' shows the common Boheiric pronunciation.
- 4. The vowel 1 is usually pronounced in both sections as i and i. I find only the variation Πιογωινι = B. piāōini, S. bäāwāini, which difference is probably due more to the vagary of the Assuân cantillator than to actual vocalic differentiation.
- 5. The vowel \mathbf{O} , long and short, appears in three forms, viz. as $\delta = (= \text{Eng. }aw)$, δ , and δ , in both dialects; cf. $\mathbf{\Phi}^{\dagger} = \mathbf{B}$. $\mathbf{E}vn\delta^u d\hat{t}$, S. $Vn\delta^u d\hat{t}$ 'God'; $\mathbf{\Theta}\mathbf{\Theta}\mathbf{m} = \mathbf{B}$. $\mathbf{E}\delta\rho\hat{t}$, S. $\mathbf{E}\delta\delta\hat{t}$ 'to be'; $\mathbf{E}\mathbf{B}\mathbf{O}\mathbf{A} = \mathbf{B}$. $\mathbf{E}v\delta \mathbf{I}$, S. $\mathbf{$ in Arabic, exhibiting practically an umlaut. The word NOO 'greatness, size,' has become nus in Egyptian Arabic; cf. kebûr zê ĕn-nûs 'big as a monster.' This is a common expression. The word means to the modern Egyptian some sort of a great animal inhabiting the mountains! In the word λλχλρροοπε (Stern) we find OO for Arabic û; 'siliqua.' The diphthong OO is a short ŏ in both dialects, as λγχοος = Β. avgŏs, S. ângŏs 'they say.' In Cairo, in the combination ΕξΟΟγ, the first O becomes û under the influence of the following diphthong ou; thus, ēhû-û 'day.'

- 6. The vowel Υ appears chiefly in diphthongs, as $\lambda \gamma$, $\epsilon \gamma$, $H \gamma$, and $o \gamma$, all of which have been discussed above. The Greek word $\psi \gamma \chi H$ 'soul,' however, is pronounced psiki.
- 7. The long \mathfrak{W} appears in both pronunciations as \tilde{o} ; cf. $\mathcal{Z}\mathfrak{W}\mathfrak{B} = \mathrm{B}$. and S . $h\tilde{o}v$ 'work'; $\mathbf{A}\gamma\mathfrak{W}\mathfrak{W}\Pi = \mathrm{B}$. $\tilde{a}v\tilde{s}\tilde{o}p\tilde{n}$, S . $\tilde{a}\tilde{a}\tilde{s}\tilde{o}b\tilde{n}$ 'they were,' etc. In the Sahidic example given above, however, $\mathbf{\Pi}\mathbf{o}\gamma\mathfrak{W}\mathbf{n}$ becomes $\tilde{b}\tilde{a}\tilde{n}w\tilde{a}\tilde{n}\tilde{n}$, no doubt under the influence of the cantillation; cf. B . $\tilde{p}\tilde{n}\tilde{o}\tilde{n}\tilde{n}$ and B . $\tilde{a}\tilde{f}\tilde{e}\tilde{n}\tilde{o}\tilde{n}\tilde{n}=\mathrm{S}$. $\tilde{a}\tilde{f}\tilde{a}\tilde{o}\tilde{n}\tilde{n}$, precisely the same vocalic combination. Stern gives the vowel \mathfrak{W} as representing Arabic \tilde{a} ; thus $\mathbf{Z}\mathbf{A}\mathbf{W}\mathbf{M} = hal\tilde{a}m$ 'cheese'; $\mathbf{T}\mathbf{W}\mathbf{B}\mathbf{1} = \mathrm{Arabic}\ T\tilde{n}b$, the fifth Coptic month.

B. The Consonants.

- 1. B appears in B. regularly as v and in S. as v at the end of words and as w between vowels; cf. $\mathcal{Z}\omega B = B$. and S. $h\bar{o}v$ 'work,' but NIBEN = B. $n\bar{v}v\bar{e}n$, S. $n\bar{v}v\bar{u}n$ 'all.' Stern's Fragment also represented $\dot{}$ by B; thus, $\dot{}$ 'coal' = $\lambda\lambda B\lambda \mathcal{E}M$; 'coal' = $\lambda\lambda B\lambda \mathcal{E}M$; 'beans' = $\lambda\lambda Bo\gamma\lambda$. The regular b-sound was represented by Πq . v., although B sometimes appears in Arabic represented by $\dot{}$; thus, $b\bar{u}l\bar{u}h$ 'date' is derived from $BE\lambda\mathcal{E}\omega\lambda$, showing pure b=B. This phenomenon was no doubt owing to the fact that the medial aspirate v is a stranger to Arabic phonology, which accordingly reproduced the sound by b. The same peculiarity is seen in $\bar{u}rd\bar{v}b=Ep\tau\omega B$ 'a measure of quantity'; $\tau\omega B1=t\bar{u}b$, etc. In Stern also we find dv is dv if dv is dv if dv is dv if dv if dv if dv is dv if dv if dv is dv if d
- 2. Γ occurs chiefly in Greek words as in ANAPKH = S. änä $\dot{g}ki$. The latter pronunciation, $\dot{g}=$ Arabic \dot{e} , is quite in accordance with Neo-Hellenic usage for pure Γ , i. e. when it is not in juxtaposition with K. Sometimes Coptic Γ is used for K, as in $AN\Gamma = ANK$ 'I.'

- 3. Δ , like Γ , generally occurs in Greek loan-words, although it appears in a few native words, as $\Delta E NO \gamma$ 'now'; $\Delta 1 \Delta O \gamma$ 'contention,' etc. It is pronounced d in B. and d, like τ , in S.; ef. $O \gamma \Delta E = B$. $a d \tilde{e}$, S. $a d \tilde{a}$.
- 4. \mathbb{Z} also is a distinctly Hellenic consonant. It is pronounced like English z in both systems.
- 5. Θ is pronounced th in Cairo, but t in Upper Egypt; thus, $\mathbf{E}\Theta\mathbf{N}\mathbf{H}\mathbf{O}\gamma = \mathbf{B}$. $\check{e}thn\hat{\imath}\hat{u}$, S. $\check{a}tn\hat{a}\hat{u}$ 'future.' This consonant in S. is merely a combination consonant for $\mathbf{T}\mathcal{E}$, as $\mathbf{\Theta}\mathbf{E} = \mathbf{T}\mathcal{E}\mathbf{E}$ 'the manner,' pronounced $t\tilde{e}$. It occurs in Stern as the equivalent of $\mathbf{E}\mathbf{E}$; ef. $\mathbf{A}\mathbf{G}\mathbf{O}\gamma\mathbf{B}\mathbf{E}\lambda = \mathbf{E}\mathbf{E}$ 'the dross.'
- 6. K is pronounced identically in both dialects. It represents in Stern; thus, λλκιν القير 'hammering'; λλκλροορΕ 'ibi,' bottle.' This is curious, because is either omitted entirely in pronunciation, as in Cairo and the vicinity, idei 'Copt' = qibti, or else it is pronounced as g, especially in Upper Egypt; thus, mā gidirtiš 'I could not.' Its representation in Stern by κ seems to show that at the time when this Fragment was written, in had its true value, i. e. q, in the Arabic of Egypt; cf. Bālāq = Πελλκ. Coptic κ represents Ancient Egyptian k and q (Steindorff, Kopt. Gr., p. 18, n. 10).
- 7. λ is uttered identically in both dialects and corresponds to the light Egyptian Arabic l. Stern, however, notes that λ represents Arabic r once, viz. in the word $\lambda \omega \omega h \lambda c = 1$.
 - 8. M and N also differ in no way from and ...
- 9. Z, on the other hand, is a ligature consonant for KC, especially in Sahidic. It appears chiefly in Greek words.
- 10. Π is pronounced p in Cairo Boheirie, probably owing to Neo-Hellenic influence, but universally b in Sahidie; thus, $\mathbf{M}\Pi\mathbf{E}\mathbf{q}\mathbf{x}\mathbf{1} = \mathbf{B}$. $mp\check{e}f\check{z}\hat{\imath}$, S. $mb\ddot{a}fg\hat{\imath}$ 'he does not say.' Note that Π is B. $\check{e}p$, but S. $b\hat{\imath}$, as in $\Pi\mathbf{C}\mathbf{A}\mathbf{x}\mathbf{1} = \mathbf{B}$. $\check{e}ps\acute{a}\check{z}\hat{\imath}$, S. $b\hat{\imath}s\acute{a}g\hat{\imath}$. Labîb states, however, that this consonant is heard in the Fayyûm

- 11. P is identical in both dialects and seems to correspond to the Egyptian Arabic); i. e. it is a very gentle trill rather than the rough Italian trill.
- 12. C, identical in both pronunciations, has the value of Arabic ω; thus, ΠΙCAΣΙ = Β. pisāži, S. bisāgi 'the word.' It was, however, used in Stern's Fragment to represent Arabic j, ω, and ω; thus, a), representing j: ACCEPNH = "
 'arsenic'; AλαΑΝCΑΡΟΤ = 'laid 'a sort of gum'; b), representing ω: ΑλΜΟΥCΑΑΤ = 'sublimate' (note that ω appears once representing Šai, as in sant = WONT 'acacia'); c), representing ω: CIq = "
 'acacia'); c), representing ω: CIq = "
 MAPHC 'south-wind'; timsāl = MCA2 'crocodile.'
- 13. T is pronounced t in the hellenizing Cairene style; thus, ΠΕΕΤΕ = Β. pē ētē, but S. bēdā. Its primitive Upper Egyptian value preceding a vowel, however, was d. Thus for TAPXH we find Cairo ĕtärchī, but S. diārchī 'the beginning'; אלב ב B. ĕnhītf, S. nīhādāf 'in it.' In the word ΑΤΌΕΝΟΥ = Β. ἄτčĕnāf, S. ατšānāyāf 'without him,' we find it pronounced as t before the following δ. In Stern it also represents the final in Αλχιπριτ = "" 'sulphur'; ΑλλΑΝCΑΡΟΤ " 'sulphur'; λλαλΝCΑΡΟΤ " 'gum', etc.; but usually stands for Δ, as in ΤΑΠΕΡΙ " 'treat'; λλελτιτ | 'iron,' etc. T also represents Arabic , as in ΑΠΙΑΤ | 'iyim', 'white.'
- 14. Φ is always v; thus, Φ HETA $\mathbf{q} = \mathbf{B}$. ví ét df, \mathbf{S} . ví át df 'he who.'

- - 16. Ψ is a ligature consonant = ps, as $\theta = th$.
- 17. Ω is pronounced š in both dialects; thus, $\omega\omega\pi n = B$. \tilde{sopi} , S. \tilde{sobi} . In $\omega \tau \lambda zoq$ the ω is pronounced in B. with a prosthetic vowel; thus, $\tilde{e}\tilde{s}tdh\tilde{o}f$, but S. $\tilde{s}td^nh\tilde{o}f$. This, of course, is due to the juxtaposition of the following t. Stern gives $\omega = \tilde{s}$, as $\lambda\omega\omega h\lambda c = \tilde{t}$, etc.
- 18. $\mathbf{q} = f$ in Upper and Lower Egypt; NA $\mathbf{q} \times \mathbf{H} = \mathbf{B}$. $n\ddot{a}fk\hat{a}$, S. $n\ddot{a}fk\hat{a}$. In Stern, only the word $\mathbf{C}\mathbf{1}\mathbf{q} = \mathbf{B}$ shows $\mathbf{q} = \mathbf{b}$, which is elsewhere represented by \mathbf{B} , q. v.
- 19. b = b in Cairo and Assuân; thus, ben = b. ben, S. ban 'in'; baten = b. baten, S. baten 'apud, juxta.' In some parts of the Delta it is pronounced k, i. e. k followed by a slight rough breathing (cf. Rochemonteix, in Mémoires de la Société Linguistique de Paris, vii., p. 273).
- 21. X is by far the most interesting of all the Coptic consonants. Roughly speaking it is equivalent to Arabic \mathcal{E} , which, however, has two distinct pronunciations between Cairo and Assuân. Arabic \mathcal{E} appears in Cairo and the Delta generally as g hard, but its palatalization becomes more and more evident as one journeys southward; thus at Assiût we hear \mathcal{E} as \widehat{gy} , at Luxor as \widehat{dy} , and at Assuân practically as \widehat{dsy} . Thus, the word 'camel' is uttered gemel, gyemel, dyemel, and dsyemel, respectively, at the places just mentioned. In the Soudan, Arabie = is plain j ($j \in j \in m \in l$), as is the case among some of the Syrian Bedawin. Nowhere in Egypt or the Soudan, so far as I know, is the pronunciation ž heard, which is the regular usage in the Syrian towns ($d = \tilde{z} \in m \in l$). The Coptic x does not, however, correspond exactly to the Egyptian Arabic z. Thus, in Cairo \mathbf{x} is pronounced hard g before the vowels a, o, u; thus, $\lambda \Upsilon X O O C = \ddot{a} v g \acute{o} s$ 'they say'; but before the vowels e, i it invariably appears strongly palatalized as ž, a sound unknown in Egyptian Arabic; thus, ΣΕ = B. žĕ 'that'; ΜΠΕQΣΙ = mpěfží 'he does not say,' etc. In Assuân, on the other hand, I heard \mathbf{X} as g in every position; thus, $\mathbf{\lambda} \mathbf{Y} \mathbf{X} \mathbf{0} \mathbf{0} \mathbf{C} = ddg \delta s$, $\mathbf{X} \mathbf{E} =$ $g\tilde{e}$, MITEQXI = $mb\ddot{a}fg\tilde{i}$, etc. In a number of other places in Upper Egypt, however, \mathbf{x} is pronounced \widehat{dy} (cf. the list of the consonantal names above, according to which even at Assuân the consonant is named $\widehat{Dyandya}$, but I heard it distinctly pronounced hard y). Here again we meet with an element of uncertainty, because the g pronunciation of π is regarded everywhere in Egypt as the elegant usage, and is accordingly imitated by educated speakers even in Upper Egypt. It is highly probable, therefore, that the priest who cantillated for me may have purposely given to X the g-sound, which is apparently unnatural at Assuân.

This entire subject is extremely difficult and is deeply involved in the question as to the origin of the g-pronunciation of Egyptian \mathcal{E} . Did the first Arabic-speaking conquerors of Egypt utter the \mathcal{E} as g or as j? It is true that g for \mathcal{E} is generally regarded as the primitive pronunciation of the consonant in the early Arabic. It is also true that \mathcal{E} is still pronounced g in some parts of Arabia. According to Wetzstein (ZDMG. xxii., pp. 163-4) the 'Aneza pronounce \mathcal{E} as hard g formed in the front of the palate, a sound which in some other tribes has developed into g at the beginning of words and has been palatalized into g at the end of words. This undoubtedly shows, then, that g = g is not necessarily a distinctively Egyptian pronunciation. As to the original pronunciation of 7 by the early Arabic invaders of the Nile-land and their descendants, what are we to say to Stern's transliteration of حجر 'stone' by ¿AÓAp (hašar), and of الزنجار 'verdigris' by ACCINÓAP (assinšár)? The consonant Šima 6 is pronounced ěgč in Cairo with prosthetic ě, and š in Assuân and Upper Egypt generally (only at Abydos sometimes h); thus, fod B. egeol, S. sol. For attenord. however, we see B. ätčěnúf, S. ätšänáväf. In other words, of represents, nearly everywhere, in Egypt, a č- or š-sound. Stern's transliteration would clearly indicate that at the time when the Fragment was written was uttered either ž or j (thus, حجر = $2\lambda \delta \lambda p$, hašar) and not hard g, which would probably have appeared as ZAXAP, hayar. But here again we must allow for possible variation in the Egyptian Arabic of that period. writer of the Fragment may have belonged to a section of country where \overline{z} was uttered as j or even \tilde{z} , whereas in other districts it may have been, and probably was, pronounced hard q.

In view of the many confusing facts in the case, it is practically impossible to arrive at any certain conclusion. I believe, however, that the hard g-pronunciation of Ganga, peculiar to both Upper and Lower Egypt, is of Egyptian and not of Arabic origin. The palatalization of Ganga before e, i in the Delta, e. g. $\mathbf{x}\mathbf{E} = \mathbf{B}$. $\tilde{z}\tilde{e}$ for S. $g\tilde{e}$, may be regarded as a local peculiarity. Furthermore, the present hard g-pronunciation of $\overline{\epsilon}$, peculiar to the Delta, but accepted everywhere in Egypt where persons of education converse, may have had a two-fold origin, viz. first, an Egyptian one from Ganga = g, which must have influenced the Arabic vernacular very strongly; and secondly—and this must not be overlooked—an Arabic one, in that some persons, and perhaps those most influential politically among the early Egyptian Arabs, may have pronounced the z as g. It is perfeetly clear, however, from the examples in Stern just quoted, that they did not all do so.

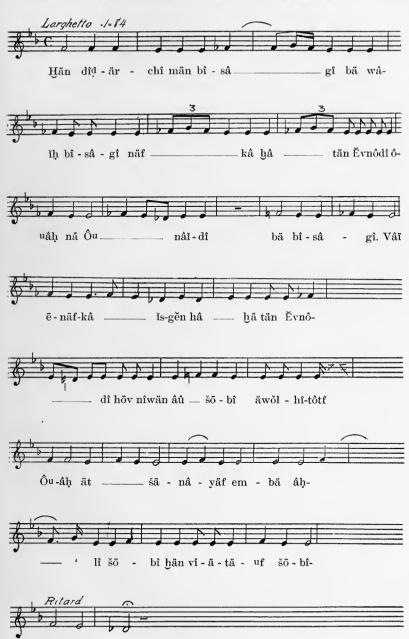

22. Υ , $\uparrow = di$ all over Egypt; thus, $\phi NO \gamma \uparrow = B$. and S. $\check{E}vn\hat{\sigma}^*di$. In Abydos the consonant is named $D\hat{e}i$ and is perhaps pronounced thus.

The following instances of differentiation between Cairo and Assuân in the text of John i. I ff. are interesting: B. $n\bar{e} = S$. $m\bar{a}n$ (Greek $\mu\acute{e}v$); B. $\check{e}p\bar{o}n\dot{b} = S$. $\check{a}\bar{o}n\dot{b}$ (with the indefinite article); B. $\check{a}\acute{o}h$ $\check{e}p\bar{o}n\dot{b}$ $n\bar{e}$ $\check{e}v\acute{a}\acute{o}in\acute{i} = S$. $\check{o}^{\mu}\acute{a}h$ $\check{e}nd\bar{e}$ $\bar{o}n\dot{b}$ $v\acute{i}\acute{a}v\acute{a}in\acute{i}$; B. $\check{a}f\acute{e}r\acute{a}\acute{o}in\acute{i} = S$. $\check{a}f\acute{a}\acute{o}in\acute{i}$. These variations, with one exception, are probably not due especially to vagaries of cantillation, but arise from slightly differing texts. The printed versions of the Coptic Scriptures in Egypt are not entirely in agreement with respect to minor points. Indeed, one of Labíb's chief objects is to establish by means of his new press a standard edition of the Scriptures. The exception noted above is S. $\bar{o}n\dot{b}$, which plainly shows an enclitic helping vowel, quite after the modern Egyptian Arabic style. This I cannot regard as a Coptic peculiarity (see above). The intercalated d in $d\acute{v}^{\dagger}\ddot{a}rch\acute{v}$ is evidently an attempt to avoid a hiatus in cantillation.

The tone or air to which the Assuan priest sang his verses is very interesting both from the musical and from the textual point of view. In order to illustrate its singular character, a few bars of it are given herewith. So far as I am aware, this is the first specimen of Coptic cantillation published in this country.

It will be noticed that the air begins on the dominant, proceeding almost immediately to the sub-dominant, and then modulating between the sub-dominant and the flatted dominant! This is a distinctly Oriental peculiarity. In the tenth bar the singer begins a new musical phrase by reverting to the natural dominant. It should be observed-and this is very strange—that the ninth bar, which is a pause after the word $\hat{O}^{u}n\hat{a}id\hat{\iota}$ 'God' (musical pronunciation for $\hat{O}^{u}n\hat{o}^{u}d\hat{\iota}$), does not end, but interrupts a sense phrase; thus, outh na Ounaidi ba bîsâgî means 'and God was the word.' This can only be explained by the supposition that the pause was purposely introduced in order to attract attention to the words ba bisagi 'he was the word.' The entire chant modulates solely between fnatural and d-flat, i. e., it touches only three notes, being even more limited in its musical range than the ordinary vernacular Arabic songs, which usually have a scope of at least five notes. The chant is sung without instrumental accompaniment.

It is not the purpose of this article to treat of the very considerable influence of Coptic on the sentence construction and vocabulary of the present Egyptian Arabic vernacular. This, together with the highly interesting subject of the Coptic phonetic treatment of Greek loan-words, must be left to another paper. It will readily be seen that the study of modern Coptic phonology is of great importance both for the Egyptologist and for the general philologist; for the Egyptologist, because only through Coptic can any knowledge of the vocalization of ancient Egyptian be arrived at, and for the general philologist, because we have in the present system of Coptic pronunciation what apparently practically corresponds to a phonographic echo of a long dead speech. Perhaps the closest modern parallel is the ceremonial use of Old Slavonic in the Slavic churches.

The present article is merely an attempt to illustrate the main characteristics of the church Coptic as it is uttered in Egypt to-day. The writer has felt himself chiefly hindered by the scantiness of the data which he was able to collect, as well as by the frequent untrustworthiness of Oriental information. In every case, however, where his Coptic instructor scemed uncertain, the statements have been either omitted or given tentatively. It is much to be hoped that the writer's efforts in this direction will be followed by further investigations on the part of European and American scholars.

I. THE RIVER SIPRA AT UJJAIN.

Notes from India, Second Series.—A Visit to Ujjain—Bhartrhari's Cave—Legends of King Vikrama.—Letters to the Corresponding Secretary from Professor A. V. Williams Jackson, Columbia University, New York City.

UJJAIN, March 10-13, 1901.—It will not be easy to forget the beauty of the Indian starlit night when I reached Ujjain, once the center of literary culture, science and art in India, made famous by the court of King Vikrama. Here at last I was in the home of many legends connected with Kālidāsa, and amid the very scenes portrayed by Çūdraka, Bhavabhūti, and the rest of the coterie whose names are associated with that period which is sometimes called the Renaissance of Sanskrit literature. Happily for the student, Ujjain in certain respects lies a little off the line of travel; so that western influence and trade have not dispelled all the glamor that still tinges the old-time city with its enchanting glow.

After a good night's rest at the Dāk Bungalow near the railway station, it was time, at 6.30 in the morning, to start on our visit through the quarters and environs of what was once the renowned capital of Malwa. Nowadays Ujjain is perhaps better known as a minor place of export for opium, and as the site of a ruined astronomical observatory that made it the Greenwich of India over two hundred years ago. Our guide and host, Mr. Keshao Rao Ramaji Thomrey, Magistrate of His Highness Sitoliya Sahib of the Gwalior State, was waiting for us, and it was but a few minutes from the Bungalow, near Mahadeo College, before we were in the streets of the historic city.

1. Ujjain.

The first glimpse that met the eye, after the bullocks and beggars, was a huge elephant almost blocking the street, like Karnapūraka's monstrous victim in the Mṛcchakaṭikā (2.2, ed. Stenzler, p. 40-42, cf. Wilson, Hindu Theatre, i. 57). Not far beyond there peeped out from a doorway a curious dwarf woman that strangely recalled the cunning Manthara of the Rāmāvana. A few paces more brought us to the fortress gate of the great Vikramāditva. The gateway itself is a crude structure two stories high, with bulky posts or buttresses. These were stained red several feet above the ground, and before one of them a young Hindu woman chanced to be kneeling in a suppliant posture, offering flowers. The portal had a solemn, ominous look, rather than a hallowed appearance; and this is in keeping with the legend recorded about it below. Tradition says that the archway once formed the entrance to Vikrama's palace; from its vaulted top now hangs a rude copper bell. On the sides of the portal are twelve columns or pillars, with scrolls and carvings, and there are two striking old figures of the sisters of the terrible goddess Kālī. These two malion deities remained at Ujiain when their sister betook herself to Calcutta, and they still continue to manifest their evil nature by bringing cholera upon the city every twelve years.

Passing over the rough stone pavement that characterizes the neighborhood of the gate and was designed, it is said, to check the hoofs of invading horsemen in bygone days, we entered a more spacious street, on the right of which stands the rather commanding palace of the Mahārāja, now used as a judicial court. See figure 2.

Directly opposite, on the left, is placed a Temple of Rāma, where our host had charge of paying a monthly stipend to the ministering priests and worshippers. Thanks to him, access was granted us at once, which is not always the case in Hindu temples.

Facing the entrance to the enclosed precinct there is a small shrine of the ever-present monkey-god Hanuman, and to the left, in the rear of this, a fane of Çiva, with the footprints of the god. To the right of the enclosure, and partly supported by twelve columns, stands the Rāma temple itself. Around these ¹The photographs illustrating these Notes were taken by my nephew, Frederic J. Agate, who accompanied me on my trip to India, and to whose kindness I am indebted for the opportunity of showing to Indologists several views which are not to be found either in Europe or India. For some reason or other Ujjain seems to have been neglected even in the Government collection.

twelve columns, as a cloistered walk, is made the pradakṣiṇa, or circumambulation in honor of Rāma; and on the right within the open temple walls is a place set apart for the daily reading of the Purāṇas. The large drums that stood near betokened a noisy accompaniment to the ritual worship. Directly in the center of the rear wall of the temple, as one looks in, there were noticed three figures in a shrine. These portrayed the semi-divine Rāma, standing in effigy between his brother Lakṣmaṇa on the right and his wife Sītā on the left. One or two ministering priests were moving about near the shrine, and on an incidental mention being made of the Vedas, some surprise, or perhaps concealed dread of profanation, was manifested when I ventured to whisper Agnim ile purohitain yajñasya devam rtvijam, etc.

A few steps beyond the shrine of Rāma, amid the maze of sacred buildings and past a temple of elephant-headed Gaṇapati, or Gaṇeça, we came to a sanctuary of Çiva, under the form in which he is worshipped in the great epic, as Mahākāla, Great Time. In front of this temple we could hear a number of Brahman boys studying the YajurVeda with their master. We listened attentively to the intoned recitative, but as soon as they caught sight of us the recitation ceased, desecrated, as of old, by a foreign or unhallowed presence.

A turn to the right led to a fine, deep tank with Brahmans bathing and washing their garments, as in the eighth act of the Mṛcchakaṭikā (cf. also Wilson i, 122, 141). Some of them were busy with their mantra prayers, but one or two, less scrupulous than the rest, asked us for 'baksheesh' to purchase 'bang'; but we hurried on, easting a glance only at the oldest Temple of Mahadeo in Ujjain, near which a superb specimen of Çiva's sacred bulls was lazily grazing.

After passing around to the other side of the tank, where a number of other priests were still going through their ablutions, we turned down a by-path to the right to visit a Hindu astronomer teaching some pupils who sat at his feet, like the scholars of Varāhamihira in Ujjain of old. This teacher, who gave his name in Sanskrit as Narāyaṇa Jyotiṣī and claimed to be a descendant of the family of Vyāsa, still adhered to the old geocentric school of astronomy, and, in making his Sanskrit explanations to his pupils and to us, he used an old iron wire figure of the universe by way of illustration.

It was necessary to retrace our steps past some small stone images of gods and godlings, along the path that descended to the large Rudra-Sāgara Pond. This partly artificial lake is one of seven said to have been constructed by Vikrama, the number seven corresponding to the seven mythical Sagaras, or oceans (cf. Rāmāyana, iii. 74. 25; Vāsavadattā, 23; and Indische Sprüche, 5508, 5742). A causeway led directly through the Rudra-Sagara to the Temple of Hari-Siddhi on the farther bank. This goddess is renowned for having saved the life of King Vikrama by bringing amrta from heaven as a balm to heal him on one occasion when he was severely burned. In grateful recognition of her beneficence the king founded a temple in her In front of the goddess's sanetuary there were standing two tall columns, with stone recentacles or cups for holding lights at the festival of Dīvāli, or Feast of Lanterns. Near by was a good specimen of a vata-vrksa or banyan tree. picture will help to make clear the position of the temple on the banks of the Rudra-Sagara, and the earthen causeway that approaches it. See figure 3.

From Hari-Siddhi's Temple it was but a short distance to the Sipra (Skt. Çiprā) river, immortalized in Kālidāsa's famous lines descriptive of Ujjain. The verses addressed to the cloud-messenger in the Meghadūta record the charm of 'Sipra's breeze' (Megh. I. 31, çiprāvāta) and the number of sārasa birds that haunt the river's banks; and the Raghuvaṅça alludes to the trees of the gardens along its shores as stirred by the breezes from its rippling waters (Raghu. 6. 35 çiprātaraūgānilakampitāsu udyānaparamparāsu). See figure 1.

The bank of the river was lined with bathing-places. As far as I could learn, these were farmed out, so that an income was assured to the respective proprietors. We noticed one particular ghāt that a widow owned as her claim. Her ideas of proprietory rights were evidently strongly developed, for a lively scene ensued when an invading bather entered her domain without paying the fee that made part of the woman's regular income. It was not necessary to understand the dialect of the vituperation, billingsgate, and mutual recriminations that followed. The gestures of the belligerent parties and the interested bystanders quite sufficed. See figure 4.

V. THE OLD ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATORY AT UJJAIN.

Not far beyond was a place marked off in a square of about twenty feet for the pagamedha, and near by was a Hindu, who, in accordance with the old Grhya-sūtra prescriptions, was going through the formal ceremony of tonsure and shaving after the loss of one of his near relatives. A few steps beyond, under a matting hovel, on his low corded bed, lay an aged Sannyāsin. One of his eyes was totally gone, all his teeth were out, and his ash-besmeared figure seemed as palsy-stricken as the rai in Sir Edwin Arnold's Light of Asia. He mumbled some lines from the Gītā on the philosophy of life, and made an unintelligible comment on far-off lands when our host tried to explain to him what was meant by America; and then he crept away to his wretched retreat.

There remained, at the moment, time only for a glimpse of the small Agastya Temple, where two Nautch girls were in attendance, and we entered our little covered pony carts to ride out to the south of Ujjain, to visit the ruins of the Astronomical Observatory. See figure 5.

This observatory was erected about A. D. 1724, by Javasinha, or Jai Sing II, Rāja of Jaipur. The photograph, which is a rare one, is worth reproducing, with a few words of explanation. It was taken from the top of a brick and cement structure which had been built to serve as a huge sun-dial. The gnomon or marker of this old Titan time-piece is a wall in the shape of a right-angled triangle, some thirty or forty feet long at its base, and more than twenty feet high from the ground to the apex of its perpendicular. The thickness of the wall is three or four feet. It is set in the plane of the meridian, and its sloping hypothenuse points to the north pole. Steps, moreover, are cut in the inclined surface of the hypothenuse, so as to give an ascent to the apex. As the photograph was taken from this apex, only the base of the huge gnomon shows in the picture. But near the foot of the perpendicular, to the left of the tree as one faces the photograph, one may easily recognize the remains of the arc of a giant circle, on which the shadow of the gnomon was wont to fall, as my colleague, Professor J. K. Rees, the astronomer, points out to me on showing him the illustration in its proof-sheet form.] Observations of the sun's approximate position, and determinations of the time of day, could readily be made by this immense instrument. There was a broken or VOL. XXIII. 21 weathered stone mural quadrant (not shown in the picture) to the left of the base of the Yantra-samrāj. This must have been used for determining the sun's altitude and zenith-distance, if my very limited astronomical knowledge, especially in Indian astronomy, allowed me rightly to identify it; but I stand ready for correction at the hands of specialists in such matters; and my notes, unfortunately, had to be hastily made. I am not clear, moreover, as to what the purpose of the horizontal solid stone cylinder may have been, which is also noticeable in the picture near the foot of the dial pointer.

The striking feature, however, of the collection of structures, as seen in the photograph, is the wall of the two large horizontal circles of stone and cement. The outer of these is about ten feet high; the inner, about six. The doorways or gates in the wall are easily seen in the picture; the one to the north overlooks the river. The use of these circular structures (diganca-vantra) was evidently for determining the time of rising of the sun, moon and stars above the plane of the horizon. But such details regarding the observatory have an attraction chiefly for those who are working in astronomy. The view from the place, however, is one to be remembered. The Sipra river near by, the prospect over the broken plain set off by a background of woods, and in the distance a slowly moving camel train, all combined to give color to the scene. A myth regarding buried treasures was not lacking, and signs were in evidence where some credulous seekers had turned up the soil in two or three places, guided by a vision seen by an old woman in a dream.

To the reader of Sanskrit literature, the streets, alleys and lanes of Ujjain are ever a source of interest. The stock characters of the old Indian dramas and of Kālidāsa's poems are as much in evidence now as in ages long ago, even to the 'city-fed bull' which sniffed about the stalls, as in the fourth act of the Mrcchakatikā (Mrcch. p. 69, ed. Stenzler; Wilson, i. 84). The scene in the present photograph is an avenue facing a modern temple of Kṛṣṇa, with a handsome silver shrine; but near the gates of the sanctuary one may notice small dealers still carrying on their trade as of yore with cowrie shells instead of money. See figure 6.

Among other places of interest for Sanskrit students is Avantī-kṣetra, or the site of old Ujjain. It is necessary to drive out a mile or so over rough, dusty roads, partly shut in by low mud walls. Here a spot is pointed out as the place where Bhartrhari used to sit, and somewhat beyond is the cave where the poet used to dwell as a hermit.

2. Bhartrhari's Cave.

The cave itself stands on an elevation overlooking a part of the river. There were numerous trees about it, well filled with birds: and the familiar crow of Sanskrit story was not absent. There is a stone shrine by the entrance to the cave: one must pass a few steps beyond this to a narrow gate in a wall, after entering which one comes to the real mouth of the cave. A few stone steps, steep and somewhat winding, lead down into the recess. To the north (if I rightly noted the points of the compass) was a small vaulted chamber where Bhartrhari underwent so great acts of penance and self-abnegation that Indra himself east his bolt from heaven to interrupt the anchorite's long-continued tapas. To the inquirer a rough circular mark in the stone slab above is pointed out to indicate how the sage raised his hand to ward off the shaft that struck the stone above his See figure 7. head.

Passing from this eremite cell eastward through a passage, one comes to a small hall or recess with a figure or picture representing Bhartrhari's teacher, Gorakṣanātha, in the center, and on the left the moralist's nephew, Gopī-cauda, his sister's son; while to the south an opening in the cavern's roof is pointed out, which is said to lead ultimately through a passage to Benares!

Ascending up steps again to the east, within this underground vault, there is an entrance to a small cave dedicated to Sarasvatī and another to Gaṇapati. Here, sculptured in the stone, two footprints were visible. They were the marks of the venerated feet of Macchendranātha, the Guru of Bhartrhari's own teacher. Near by, in another passage or recess, was a part of a large linga of Çiva, known as the Çañkara-Sinha Linga. This must have been but one of many, for there are said to be no less than eighty-four sacred 'lings' in Ujjain.

¹ On returning from India I am able to add now a reference to a brief allusion to the names mentioned in this paragraph, in P. G. Nath's edition of Bhartrhari, Bombay, 1896, pp. 8, 21, 43, 48.

Inquiry with regard to Bhartrhari's history, who is looked on as the brother of Vikrama (see below), brought out the story of his favorite wife Pingala in but a slightly different form from that elsewhere recorded. To test the devotion of his beloved on one occasion when hunting, he caused to be sent her his garments stained with the blood of a kid. Pingala dropped dead at the sight; and on learning this, Bhartrhari wished to live no longer. But to comfort the poet his Guru declared he could make a hundred Pingalas, which he did forthwith. Bhartrhari became puzzled and could not discover his true wife; thereupon he renounced the world and became a Sannyāsin. This is a different story from the familiar one in the commentator to the famous dhik-verse (Nīticataka, 2) regarding the precious fruit (phala) bestowed upon his wife Anangasena and given by her to her paramour. It is the one dramatized, as I was informed, in the plays relating to Bhartrhari. The renunciation of the world and adopting the life of a recluse, account for the associations gathered about the cave, although it is stated that there are some corresponding cells in other places in India.1

Time was reserved for visiting other places on the Sipra river, especially the Gaūgā-ghāt, a fine landing with steps near one of its curves; and from the parapet a good outlook could be had over the dust-mounds of the older city.

In returning along a more remote road the site of a lonely temple of Durgā was passed, which one might associate with the terrific scenes in the fifth act of Bhavabhūti's Mālatī-mādhava, describing her as the terrible goddess Cāmundā and her cruel skull-necklaced priestess Kapāla Kundalā. Besides the story about Kālidāsa recorded in JAOS. xxii, p. 331, there was an opportunity to gather a legend of Vikrama and the rise of newer Ujjain from the dust of the older Avantikā. The account as Mr. Thomrey related it ran almost as follows:

3. Legends of Vikrama and Old Ujjain.

'On one occasion Gandharvasena, son of Indra, was sitting with his father in Svarga, watching a dance of the Apsarases. Gandharvasena chanced to laugh at one of the dancing girls; whereupon his father grew exceedingly angry and called him an ass (khara), pronouncing at the same time a curse upon him that he should descend to earth and become an ass. The son begged the angry god at least to tell him to what place he should turn his steps, and at his father's bidding Gandharvasena went to Ujjain and lived in the Forest of Mahākāla (Mahākālavana).

¹ See now a mention of one at Mount Abū and of one at Achalgarh, in P. S. Nath, op. cit., p. 45.

'Now the daughter of the king of Avantikā, or old Ujjain, came to offer worship to the god Mahākāla, as a form of Çiva. She caught sight of the ass, who spoke to her in Sanskrit, at which she became interested and inquiring "Who are you?" asked all about him. Thereupon Gandharvasena laid aside his ass's guise and appeared in his true form. Immediately she became enamored of him and the union of their love was sealed.

'It thus happened that Gandharvasena came every night in his perfect form to visit his loved one, and would then take again his ass's shape in the morning. Accordingly the thought occurred to the princess, "If I could only burn the body of the ass, there would remain alone and forever the form of the man." With this idea, on one occasion when Gandharvasena was sitting by her in human guise, and his two forms were distinct, she threw the ass's body into the fire. A marvel instantly ensued. No sooner had the form of the ass touched the flames than Gandharvasena began to shriek in agony, and in his anguish he cried to her, "Flee hence, for I shall bring the dust of heaven upon this place." So she fled, bearing within her womb the fruit she had conceived by Indra's son.

'A fearful shower of dust from heaven forthwith descended, which buried the old city. But the princess who had escaped gave birth to twin sons. One of these was Vikramāditya; the other was Bhartrhari.' Such, according to legend, was their semi-divine origin, and thus the tradition is repeated that Bhartrhari was an elder brother of Vikrama and that he held the kingdom of Dhār, or rather Dhārā-nagara, the capital of Malwa'

A newer Ujjain seems then to have come into existence in place of the old, but I did not gather any legendary account as to its beginnings. Misfortunes, however, attended upon the place, partly as a result of Gandharvasena's curse, and one of the legends as to how Vikrama became king of it is preserved somewhat as follows:

'Owing to the effect of Gandharvasena's curse which still hung over the city, the awful goddess Kālī used every day to devour him who had just been anointed king, so that the city would ever be without a ruler. On one particular day the son of a potter woman was chosen to be king. Impending death stared the unwilling monarch in the face. But to the weeping mother Vikrama came as a beggar, for such in reality he was, and learning the cause of the distress he offered himself as a substitute. He was gladly accepted and joyfully installed in the fatal office. But a remedy was in his hands as the sequel proved.

'Kālī was wont, as the legend goes, to come to the palace every night along the remote road mentioned above, and then to destroy the king. On this very pathway Vikrama therefore sacrificed buffaloes and other animals, dug small holes which he filled with wine, and strewed the road with sweetmeats, perfumes, and a carpet of flowers. The cruel goddess partook of these offerings with such delight and was propitiated to such a degree, that when she reached the spot where Vikrama's Gate now stands, she declared herself ready to grant any boon to the one that had so gratified her. It is hardly necessary to add that Vikrama begged that his own life be spared as king and that Kālī should depart from Ujjain, never to return.

'Forced by her pledge she granted these boons, quit Ujjain, and went to Calcutta, but left her two sisters, whose images are now seen at the portal, and granted them the privilege of devouring, every twelve years, as many human lives as they pleased. This they do by cholera, as stated above. In addition to this, moreover, seven girls and five buffaloes were to be sacrificed to them each year—carrying out the old tradition of human sacrifices to Durgā.'

These sacrifices used regularly to be fulfilled, and it is stated that those men who gave their five-year-old daughters to be slain received grants of land as a recompense. It is needless to add that the English Government put a stop to such cruel sacrifices, so that now only the buffaloes are killed at the Dagaratha festival in October on the ninth day (nomi) of the month $\bar{A}cvina$. The girls that are now set free are not allowed to marry, however, although the land-compensation is made to their fathers as before. The heads of the buffaloes are buried by the archway which was daubed with red paint, and these are taken out each year when the fresh ones are slaughtered. It was stated that the officiating priests were of the Baläi caste, a sort of Çūdra class, and they eat the flesh of the buffaloes which they sacrifice.

With regard to other legends and the drama, no tradition seems to be preserved about Urvaçī, although one would expect it, owing to the close association of her name with Vikrama throughout Sanskrit literature. But other inquirers may be more fortunate in that matter. It was interesting to learn that the Candakāuçika is sometimes played at Ujjain in a Marāṭhī version; and also the Mṛcchakaṭikā, which must be particularly appropriate in the very scene where its plot is laid, and of course Çakuntalā is sometimes given. But the list of plays I learned would not be complete without including Shakspere, whose dramas they likewise sometimes perform—a happy union of East and West. Such at least are some among the many points of interest to me, and they will ever make the recollection of my visit to Ujjain a bright one.

The Relation of the Vedic Forms of the Dual.—By Dr. George M. Bolling, Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C.

THE beginning of the understanding of the Vedic endings of the dual $-\bar{a}u$ and $-\bar{a}$ dates from the article of Rudolf Meringer, Beiträge zur geschichte der idg. declination, KZ, xxviii. pp. 217 ff. In this article Meringer showed clearly that these two forms of the dual were nothing but sentence-doublets of one and the same form, and maintained that their original distribution was faithfully reflected by their occurrence in the Rig Veda: $-\bar{a}$ before consonants and in pause: $-\bar{a}v$ before all vowels except u; before u the semi-vowel was lost. An important correction of this view was made by Bechtel, Hauptprobleme der ida, Lautlehre seit Schleicher, p. 285, where he argues that since O. N. átta and Gothic ahtáu can represent neither *oktō nor *oktou, it follows that the parent language must have possessed also the form *oktōu, a form that is not represented in the Rig Veda except where it is suspected to be of 'later' origin, and that, therefore, the original distribution must have been $-\bar{o}$ before consonants, $-\bar{o}u$ before vowels, and $-\bar{o}u$ in pause. correction of Meringer's theory enabled Bechtel (compare the admirable exposition, op. cit., p. 282) to bring under the same principle the locative forms in $-\bar{a}$, $-\bar{a}u$. The application to the perfect forms had already been made by Collitz, AJP, ix, p. The theory thus modified has been accepted by Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, p. 107. As the acceptance, however, is not yet universal—compare Brugmann, Grundr. I2 pp. 203 n., 883, 888-it may be of service to point out another argument that will strengthen Bechtel's position and at the same time illustrate a truth that at the present time needs emphasis on account of an unwillingness in certain quarters to accept its logical consequences, viz., that the dialect of the Rig Veda is not the 'mother dialect' of the dialects on which are based the Atharva Veda, the Brāhmanas, the Sūtras, and in general the later literature.

The point which I hope to make clear is that it would have been impossible for the 'later' language to obtain its duals in -āu if it had ever passed through the stage of development that is represented by what is called 'the oldest portions' of the Rig Veda. Before attempting to show this I will examine two of the most recent discussions of the relations of these forms, the latter of which will involve a question of method. Arnold, JAOS, xviii, p. 347, sees in the form $-\bar{a}u$, which he considers 'a note of later date,' the result of a striking process termed "flexional expansion," due to efforts (which in the main he takes to be conscious) 'to introduce distinctness into flexional elements originally slight in bulk and of multiple connotation.' The suggestion contains all the novelty which the author claims for it, but based as it is on the numerical relations of the two forms, its criticism may be found in the article of Meringer already cited, p. 229: "Wenn man sagt und das wird jetzt die landläufige meinung sein: Im R. V. verhalten sich die \bar{a} - zu den $\bar{a}u$ - formen wie 1129: 171, also sind die \bar{a} - formen die alten, aus ihnen entwickeln sich erst die au-formen und gelangen schliesslich zur alleinherrschaft—so ist das ganz falsch und verkehrt." It remains to point out only that if Arnold's conception of the relation of the forms could possibly be true, his conclusion that the $\bar{a}u$ -forms are indications of late date would be justified. But the manifest error of his premise must of itself tend to shake belief in the justness of his conclusions. the error of this view Arnold himself seems to be partly conscious, since in KZ. xxxvii, p. 446 instances of -āu before vowels are not included in the "Notes of late date."

An attempt of Oldenberg to reconcile Meringer's explanation of the relation of these forms with the theory that those in $-\bar{a}u$ (except before vowels) are indicative of a late date is found in ZDMG. liv, pp. 187 ff.: "Hinreichend gesicherte grammatische Theorien lehren uns als Anfangspunkt der Entwicklung die Verteilung jener Formen als Satzdoubletten je nach dem vokalischen oder konsonantischen Anlaut des folgenden Wortes kennen. Andererseits als Endpunkt der Entwicklung steht die in der jüngeren Sprache geltende Alleinherrschaft des $-\bar{a}u$ fest. Zwischen Anfang und Ende kann es nur den typischen Kampf ums Dasein, wie er zwischen Satzdoubletten stattzufinden pflegt, gegeben haben; ein Laxerwerden der alten Sandhiregel, Vordringen der $-\bar{a}u$ -form muss erwartet werden." From this and especially the last clause I can only understand that according to the conception of the writer, the form was always $-\bar{a}u$, that in the period when the old samdhi rules were strictly applied. that is in the period of the 'Rig Veda proper,' this form before consonants (and in pause) became $-\bar{a}$, but that later the relaxation of these rules allowed -au to remain under these conditions. But with all the respect due to Oldenberg's opinion. I must submit that this view is in contradiction to one of the clearest principles of linguistic science, namely, that such changes do not take place each time that a word is spoken but that this result is either received from other speakers and then reproduced by memory, or that the form is produced after the analogy of It is exactly as if one were to maintain that . forms so received. $\pi \epsilon \pi \nu \sigma \tau a \nu$ would have reverted to * $\pi \epsilon \pi \nu \theta \tau a \nu$ at any time that a relaxation of the Greek 'rules of euphony' had set in (compare Brugmann, Griech. Gram. p. 12). The only way in which one of such sentence-doublets can invade the territory of the other is by the way of analogy, and this brings us back to the question, if the Atharva and the classic literature are the direct developments out of a period, that of the "Rig Veda proper," which had for the dual only $-\bar{a}v$ before vowels, $-\bar{a}$ before consonants and in pause, how did the form in $-\bar{a}u$ develop?

This difficulty was distinctly realized by Meringer, loc. cit., p. 225 ff., and met by the supposition that the form in $-\bar{a}v$ was analogically transferred to the position before consonants, that in this position it became $-\bar{a}u$ and was then generalized. view is, in my opinion, untenable for the following reasons: first, on account of the comparative rarity of the ending $-\bar{a}v$, because of the rarity of the conditions under which it occurs. This argument in itself is not cogent but must be allowed some weight in connection with the following. Secondly, in the cases of $-\bar{a}v$ followed by a vowel, the v is drawn over to the next syllable—compare especially the cases of its loss when the following word begins with \check{u} , which are identical with cases like $\bar{u}rmis$ >*uūrmis; Brugmann, Grundr. I² p. 302—hence it is at least extremely improbable that an ending $-\bar{a}v$ would be abstracted from such a situation.1 Thirdly, this ending $-\bar{a}v$ would not become $-\bar{a}u$ before all consonants; cf. the medial forms $v\bar{a}ja-d\bar{a}vn\bar{a}m$, sahasrad $\bar{a}vn\bar{a}m$, ar $\bar{a}vnah$ somap $\bar{a}vn\bar{a}m$. Yet in spite of the fact that we are supposed to have extensive records of the transition period, no such forms as $-\bar{a}v$ n- occur. Finally in locatives such as $agn\bar{a}u$, in which similar forces are at work, we see clearly that the $-\bar{a}u$ forms appear in pause before they appear before consonants.

In view of these facts it is much simpler, and in my opinion necessary, to start from the distribution of the forms that Bechtel has proven for the Indo-European, namely, -\(\tilde{\alpha}\) before eonsonants. $-\bar{o}u$ before yowels, and $-\bar{o}u$ in pause; and to assume that we have analogy working in opposite directions in different dialects, whether these dialects be those of different localities or of different social strata of the same locality. In the dialect which is the basis of the "Rig Veda proper," the result is that $-\bar{a}$ is extended to the position in pause and in part to the position before vowels; while in the dialect or dialects which are the basis of the Atharva Veda, and of the later literature in general, the form in $-\bar{a}u$ was extended to the position before consonants. In confirmation of this it may be pointed out that on this hypothesis the forms in $-\bar{a}$ and $-\bar{a}u$ will each be so numerous that the operation of analogy in either direction will be easily intelligible.

The first conclusion to be drawn from this is that as we have no means for determining the relative chronology of these changes in the two (or more) dialects concerned, we can draw no inferences as to the time of composition of hymns composed in the different dialects. It remains to be seen whether we can arrive at any criteria that will be of service for arranging the hymns that are composed in the same dialect. To determine this, it will be necessary to examine other forms, and first the duals in -a. To Arnold these are simply the form from which by "flexional expansion" come the duals in -ā, loc. cit., p. 347, and consequently all occurrences fall in his "period A." Mahlow, Die langen Vocale, p. 130, and Meringer, loc. cit., p. 233, consider these forms as originally vocatives, the only use in which they are attested. Osthoff, MU. i, 226 ff., believed that they preserved the ending of the consonantal stems * $p\bar{a}da$ = $\pi \delta \delta \epsilon$, which had been transferred to the o-stems by analogy. But this fails to explain why the form occurs only as a vocative, and only in the o-stems, an omission which Brugmann, Grundr. ii, p. 645, tries to make good by assuming the influence of the vocative singular. The hypothesis does not seem to me probable, and I would suggest instead that we have in reality in all cases vocative singulars, that have been misinterpreted at least as far back as the time of the diaskenasts.

Of the material collected by Lanman, Noun Inflection, p. 342, is to be set aside, first, asta, RV, x, 27, 15. The saidhi conceals the quantity of the final, but, conceding that the padapātha is correct, asta can be due only to the analogy of sapta (cf. Brugmann, Grundr, ii, 480), nava, daca, all of which occur in this same verse. Of the remaining cases, vi. 63, 1: 67. 8 do not contain the form in the text nor in the padapātha. Here the form in -a cannot be introduced into the text, the first passage containing a nominative which is unparalleled, the second containing an adjective which is also without parallel except for dhrtavrata, i. 15. 6, due to the immediate neighborhood of mitrāvaruna. Nor does the meter require this form. Compare for the first passage Oldenberg, Die Humnen des Rigveda, p. 467, and apply the same principle to the second, reading ahrta-annā for ahrtānnāv. Almost all the other examples are either dvandva compounds or supposed cases of elliptical duals, and any explanation to be satisfactory must do justice to this fact. I would suggest therefore that in mitravaruna, i. 15. 6^b, indrāvaruna, i. 17. 3^b, 7^a, 8^a, 9^b, we have really two vocatives indrā váruna, (compare, for example, váruna mitra sádathah, v. 67. 2b), and that the shift of accent, whether made by the poets or diaskenasts, is due to the analogy of mitravaruna, The length of the final syllable of the first vocative may be due to the same cause, but more probably it is a case of an elliptical dual followed by a singular. Compare Delbrück, Grundr. iii, p. 138, and RV. vi. 68. 5b, indrā yó vām varuna đácati tman with viii. 25, 2, mitrá tánā na rathyà váruno yác ca sukrátuh. There is no more reason to posit in the former case a vocative dual varuna than a nominative dual varuno or varunas in the latter. In cases like vii. 61. 1a, úd vām cáksur varuna suprátikam, I believe that we have the invocation of merely one of the deities to suggest the pair "the beautiful eve of ye two, O Varuna." Ultimately the phenomenon rests on the same basis as the use of εἰπέ, φέρε, ἄγε when more than one person is addressed, explained by Gildersleeve, Syntax of Classical Greek, § 59, as due to the shifting of the speaker's eye. Compare also v. 64. 6^a ; 66. 6^b , and vii. 85. 4, where the epithet $\bar{a}ditya$ suggests especially Varuṇa. If, on the contrary, varuṇa is explained as $= varuṇ\bar{a} = mitr\bar{a}varuṇ\bar{a}$, it controverts the principle (cf. Delbrück, $l.\ c.$, p. 137) that the last member of a dvandva compound cannot be used elliptically.

Apparently more strange are the cases in which, instead of the names of one of the pair, an epithet applicable to both is employed in the singular, asura, i. 151. 4; deva, vii. 60. 12^a; viii. 9. 6^b; pāúra, v. 74. 4; vīra, vi. 63. 10^c. The same principle is still applicable here, though it must be noted that in these cases, except the last, the short vowel is not demanded by the meter. If it is correct, it may be that we have here only imitations of an archaism that was not fully understood. Finally, in v. 67. 1, three gods are invoked, varuṇa, mitra, aryaman, and deva may be singular applying to the last, while ādityā naturally applies to the two first. The concordance is further irregular in having a dual verb.

There remains, then, as a possible criterion for later date within the hieratic language itself, the extension by analogy of the forms in $-\bar{a}$ to the position before vowels. At first sight it seems tempting to suppose that this analogical process leading to the obliteration of the last trace of $-\bar{a}u$ took place at the end of the period of the "Rig Veda proper." Further consideration, however, will show that this is not necessarily the case. We are dealing with an artificial language, and this impulse toward a more rigid uniformity may have manifested itself at an early time and failed to become universal, or it may have proceeded from different individuals at different times. Besides, there is the possibility that forms such as pāde 'va are not analogical but contain the old form of the dual of consonant stems = $\pi \delta \delta \epsilon$ (compare Meringer, loc. cit., p. 230), which has elsewhere been superseded by the endings of the o-stems. Finally, there is the possibility that some of these forms are of the latter, some of the former origin, and we have no means of deciding which are which. Under the circumstances it seems impossible to use even these forms as criteria of date. having touched on the subject of the consonant duals, I will call attention to one force which, though commonly overlooked, must have been at work in their development. The current view is that *pāda=πόδε fell under the analogy of acvā acvāu acvāv merely on account of their identity of function. identity of form must also have been brought about, in some cases, as follows: *nara=ἀνέοε, and other words with short penult, would be liable to rhythmic lengthening before single consonants, resulting in the sentence doublets *nara narā. *acvina acvinā, etc. The latter form was then generalized. and under its influence *pāda was supplanted by pādā. this the proportion $acv\bar{a}$: $acv\bar{a}u$: $acv\bar{a}v = p\bar{a}d\bar{a}$: x yields the forms $p\bar{a}d\bar{a}u$ and $p\bar{a}d\bar{a}v$. That the form $p\bar{a}d\bar{a}$ for $p\bar{a}d\bar{a}v$ before yowels is a relic of the older period, and that hastā in the same position is analogical to it, is possible, but there is no numerical predominance of the consonantal stems in such positions, such as would have tended to support this view. I am therefore inclined to believe that the difference between the a-stems and other stems in this form was completely obliterated at an early period, though the other possibility must remain, rendering uncertain any employment of these forms as a criterion of date.

Contributions from the Jāiminīya Brāhmaṇa to the history of the Brāhmaṇa literature.—By Professor Hanns Oertel, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

Fourth Series: Specimens of verbal correspondences of the Jāiminīya Brāhmaņa with other Brāhmaņas.

A NUMBER of passages from the Jāiminīya Brāhmaṇa printed in previous papers showed a marked resemblance, not only in contents but also in their wording, to similar chapters in other Brāhmaṇas. The story of Yājñavalkya's encounter with the Brāhmans of the Kurupañcālas (JB. ii. 76–77, printed in JAOS. xv. 238), for example, is almost identical in its phrase-ology with the account given in ÇB. xi. 6. 3.2 In the same way the material collected in JAOS. xviii. 26 ff. shows a very striking agreement between the JB. and the Çāṭyāyana Brāhmaṇa.

Upon the basis of a careful collection of such parallels the relative position of the JB among the other Brāhmaṇas must ultimately be determined. But such comparisons also throw light on the manner in which our present corpus Brāhmaṇicum was composed, and, when made in sufficient number, 3 they will help to decide the question in how far a certain amount of legendary and dogmatic stock in trade, cast in definite and accepted forms, existed before our Brāhmaṇas were compiled in their present form and was freely drawn upon by the compilers. 4

¹ Series I was printed in JAOS. xviii. p. 15; Series II in xix. p. 97; and Series III in Actes du onzième Congrès International des Orientalistes. Paris—1897. Vol. i (1899), p. 225.

Pending a final decision of this vexed and intricate problem, every increase of our material is welcome. The selections here printed seemed noteworthy not only on account of the closeness of verbal correspondence, but also on account of their length. especially the third. As both the CB, and the first book of the SB, have been translated, an English version of the JB, extracts is here omitted.

The only important differences in the two versions are these: xii. 4. 1. 12 (the lowing of the agnihotri-cow); 4. 4. 4 (lightning burns the sacrificial fire); and 4, 4, 5 (the sacrificial fires come in contact with profane fires) are peculiar to CB. On the other hand, while CB, xii, 4, 2, 5 (=JB, i, 57, 1) mentions only one disturbance of the sacrifice through the death of the sacrificer, the JB, (i. 57, 2 and 3) adds two others. It also mentions (i. 64. 4) as a separate contingency the fusion of the āhavanīya and gārhapatya fires.

Phrases of Time and Age in the Sanskrit Epic.—By E. Washburn Hopkins, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

[This paper is the second installment in the series announced above, First Half, p. 109.]

A NOTICEABLE trait in Sanskrit is the habit of expressing time-relations by adjectives. The epic has many examples: a-nirdaça ("not out of the ten days," xii. 36. 26); şaştika = sastikāudama ("rice that ripens in sixty days"); caturthaka ("a fever that comes every four days"); māsakālikam (vetanam, "wages for a month"); ekamāsin ("in a month"); māsikasamcayāh ("those who have a month's store"); dvādacavārsika (a boy "of twelve," or a store "for twelve years"); trāivārsikam bhaktam adhikam cā 'pi ("food for three years or more", xii, 165, 5; 245, 8 ff.). Compare the adverbial relation, idam āhnikam kurvan, "doing this daily" (aharahah). The adjectival relation exchanges with the accusative of the Thus, the period of the Manes' joy, according to the food offered to them, is expressed by the plural accusative, except in the case of the four-month unit, caturmāsam, or by adjectives, trptir daçamāsikī, dvādaçavārsikī, etc., xiii. 88. Unique is māsacārika, "occupied for a month", xii. 5 ff. 358. 8.

Our "never" in "never before done", "I am never weary of hearing you", is usually expressed by the simple negative, akṛtam pūrvam, na hi tṛpyāmi kathyataḥ. Thus, "he never got there", na kila tatra yacchat saḥ; "one should never transgress the rule", na cā 'nyad iha kartavyam kimcid ūrdhvam yathāvidhi. But na karhi cit and na kadā cana occur when emphasis is required, and yadā with the negative is used in the same way: nā 'sūyāmi yadā viprān, "I never murmur against the priests", xiii. 36. 4.

"Lately", besides phrases such as na cirāt (maryāde 'yam sthāpitā, i. 122. 8), is nava-, in composition: navaja, "lately born" (later born is avaraja, with ablative, i. 128. 29); navavadhū, "lately a bride" (unique in the epic, vii. 146. 31). Lately as "just now" is idānīm tāvad eva, xii. 227. 99. "As soon as" is expressed by mātra, "merely": cintitamātram āgatam, "merely (as soon as) thought of it came", i. 19. 21; jātamātre, "as soon as he was born", i. 123. 7; āsannamātraḥ puruṣas tāiḥ, "as soon as they reached the man", xiii. 111. 32; nivṛttamātre tv ayana uttare vāi divākare, "as soon as the sun returned upon its northern course", xii. 47. 3. The same idea may of course be expressed in other ways. Thus "as soon as morning comes" is kalyam eva, i. 164. 10; "as soon as tomorrow comes", cva idānīm. "Too long a time" is atimahān kālaḥ, xiv. 14. 14. "Too early" and "too late" are expressed by atikalyam, atisāyam, xiii. 104. 24 (Manu iv. 140) in a section made up of Manu and (from 31 on) of xii. 300 ff.

In determining the exact time, some words make the context necessary. Thus upasthite kṛtyakāle and upasthite 'smin saṃ-grāme mean just before the time of action and war; but in xi. 25. 44, upasthite varṣe means when the year has actually arrived. As a general thing, however, the sense is clear: saṃvatsare prāpte, at the beginning of the year; samāpte, gate, pūrṇe, vyatīte, at the end of the year; tuta iṣṭe 'hani prāpte muhūrte sādhusammate, "when an auspicious day arrived and an hour approved by the soothsayers", i. 113. 18; aprāptavati tasmin yāuvanam, "without his having reached manhood", i. 101. 4. Peeuliar is abhi-gatāḥ (samāç catasraḥ), iii. 158. 3, followed by paūcamīm abhitah samām, "about."

Both the personal and impersonal use of participles with timewords are current: $k\bar{a}le\ pr\bar{a}pte\ tith\bar{a}u\ kṣaṇe$, iii. 57. 1; $ptuk\bar{a}lam\ anupr\bar{a}pt\bar{a}$, i. 63. 40; $ptuk\bar{a}le\ sampr\bar{a}pte$, ib. 82. 5. He "made time" is "died," expressed both by $k\bar{a}ladharmam\ upeyiv\bar{a}n$ and by $k\bar{a}lain\ cak\bar{a}ra$. Words for "before" and "after" are discussed in the article on syntax (see below). Here I will note only that $ita\dot{p}$ points backward as well as forward, and that $pur\bar{a}$ is future (as well as past) in xii. 322. 35 ff.

¹ So $id\bar{a}n\bar{i}m$ is "at once." The morrow-phrases are very numerous. The noun is $cvahk\bar{a}la$ (the scholiast, xiii. 76. 5, cf. i. 195. 32, says that one should beware of confusing this with $svak\bar{a}la$, which would mean one's death-day). The adverbs are cvah, cv

The subject of meal-time, so engrossing to the ascetic, is worthy of a special paragraph. Most of the adjectival forms referred to above have to do with eating. Thus, caturthakālika. one who cats once in two days (caturthāstamakāla, in two or four): trirātra, one who eats once in three days; kāle caturthe, sasthe kāle, at the end of two days, three days. The participle is sometimes added: caturthe nivate kāle kadā cid ani cā 'stame. "(I eat) only once in two or even four days" (trsnāvinayanam bhuñie), xv. 3, 25. In all cases like kāle caturthe, sasthe, astame (at the end of two, three, or four days), as in iii. 179. 16; 293. 9: iii, 84, 54 and 150; xii, 165, 61; xiv, 57, 3 ff., the ordinal is to be halved for the number of days; sasthakālopavāsin being equivalent to trivatrah, one who fasts for three days. word for time is sometimes expressed by the word for meal, as in xii. 165. 11. bhaktāni sad anaçan, "fasting six meals" (three days). Occasionally the word for time is merely implied. Thus, "one who takes food once in ten days" is $dac\bar{a}h\bar{a}ra$ (= $dac\bar{a}h\bar{a}$ hāra): saptarātradacāhāro dvādacāhikabhojanah, "a sevennight (or) ten-dieter (or) a twelve-day feeder", xii. 304, 17. Haplology helps (so to speak, "a ten-dayit man" from "tenday-diet"), as is recognized by the scholiast, eko hākāro luptah. The rule for eating is laid down several times in the later epic, and always in about the same words, to the effect that one should take two meals a day and not eat between-times: "Eve and morn is eating ordained in the Veda for men; eating betweentimes is not approved", xii. 193. 10; "One would (get the merit of a) perpetual fast if one did not eat between the morn-meal and evening-meal", antarā prātarāçam ca sāyamāçam tathāi 'va ca, xii. 221. 10; "One should not sleep by day, nor in the first or last part of the night; nor should one eat between-times", na divā prasvapej jātu na pūrvāpararātrisu, na bhuñjītā 'nta $r\bar{a}k\bar{a}le$, xii. 244. 6-7; in xiii. 104. 95, the same rule, with $n\bar{a}$ 'ntarāle. Food taken at one time and another (as we sav) is bhaktam bhaktam annam. A list of fasts and fasters is given at xii, 304, 16 ff., ekarātrāntarācitva, ekakālikabhojana, catur-thāṣṭamakāla, ṣāṣṭhakālika, ṣaḍrātrabhojana, aṣṭāhabhojana, and so on, up to māsopavāsin; but such fasts up to a month are surpassed in xiii. 106 and 107, where are told the rewards for fasting by degrees, up to a thirty-days fast for ten years. Two meals a day is the rule in Āp. Dh. S. ii. 1. 1. 2, kālayor bhojanam, and ÇB. ii. 4. 2. 6. "eat only in the evening and morning."

As indriya, mahābhūta, tattva, sarga, etc. in the philosophical phraseology of the epic are either masculine or neuter, as recorded in my Great Epic, pp. 98, 102, 130, etc., so in the eategory of time-words there is more or less confusion of gender, the tendency being in this class to convert masculines into neuters in the later epic. The change from neuter ayuta to masculine occurs in iii. 40. 1. varsāmutān bahūn: but ordinarily the change is in the opposite direction and is found in the great mass of later additions; in both epics, for that matter. Thus, the regular gender of muhūrta is masculine, but in R. vii. 34, 9 we find idam muhūrtam (Gorr. has imam) and in Mbh. xiii, 14, 379, dināny astāu tato jagmur muhūrtam iva, "eight days passed then like a moment". So varsapūgān is a constant phrase; but in R. i. 48. 16, we find varsapāgāny anekāni, and in Mbh. xii. 223. 20, bahūni varsapūgāni. Again, nimesa is everywhere masculine, till in xiii, 100, 41 occurs aksinimesāni.

The confusion is of course found in other categories as well, and occasionally we find a Vedic reversion, as in xiii. 42. 17, dadarça mithunam nrṇām cakravat parivartantam grhītvā pāninā karam,

"he saw a pair of men revolving hand in hand"; where the scholiast says that both the active voice and the masculine gender of the participle are justified by Vedic usage.

AGE.

Age, from birth on, janmaprabhrti, or from childhood up, bālyāt prabhrti, till the limit of life, param āyuḥ, when one passes it, gatāyuḥ, and gives up the ghost, parāsuḥ, may be indicated by a simple number: gatā¹ trir aṣṭavarṣatā dhruvo 'si

¹ Though atīta, vyatīta, vyatīkrānta, are more common, yet gata is not unusual of time passed, e. g. i. 98. 11, sanvatsarān rtūn māsān bubudhe na bahūn gatān, "knew not that many years, etc., had passed."

pañcavingakah (cf. agītika, etc.), "thrice eight years are gone, you are twenty-five", xii. 322. 63; by the formal addition of 'age' (in the last example this follows, vayo hi te 'tivartate), pañcāgadvarṣavayāḥ, "aged fifty years", xii. 85. 9; or vārṣika or 'year' or 'arrived,' etc., is expressed, as in xi. 3. 15–16:

garbhasthoʻ vā prasūto vā 'py atha vā divasāntaraḥ ardhamāsagato vā 'pi māsamātragato 'pi vā samvatsaragato vā 'pi dvisamvatsara eva vā yāuvanastho 'tha madhyastho vrddho vā 'pi vipadyate.

Current² phrases are saptāhajāta, a week old, viii. 68. 10; māsajāta, a month old; dvihāyanavat, like a two-year old, xii. 267. 28; trihāyana, a three-year old, soḍaçavarṣa, a sixteen-year old, ṣaṣṭihāyana, ṣaṣṭivarṣin, a sixty-year old (elephant), açītiçatavarṣā, a hundred and eighty years old (woman), daçadvādaçavarṣāḥ, (children) of ten or twelve, iii. 188. 60; daçavarṣin, çatavarṣin, çatavarṣasahasrin, xiii. 8. 21; 18. 7. Peculiar is xiii. 30. 31, "as soon as born he became (grew) thirteen years old," sa jātamātro vavṛdhe samāḥ sadyas trayodaça. In xiii. 102. 57, daçavarṣāṇi (bālaḥ) can searcely be "ten years of age" (but goes with the verb).

In a repeated stanza, vii. 125. 73=192. 64=193. 43, Drona is declared to be vayasā 'çītipañcakaḥ "eighty-five in age"; yet this is said by the scholiast to mean "four hundred years old", which perhaps in an earlier text would be correct; but Drona has so much that is modern that one need not hesitate to believe that this is merely a late and artificial way of saying eighty-five ("having eighty and pentad"). So saika is used for six in the late epic and the late Pañcarātra, cit. PW., has a parallel, çatāṣṭaka, not eight hundred but one hundred and eight. The usual divisions of life are embryo, childhood, youth, age:

yarbhaçayyām upādāya bhajate pūrvadehikam bālo yuvā vā vṛddhaç³ ca yat karoti çubhāçubham tasyām tasyām avasthāyām bhuūkte janmani janmani,

¹ Compare şāṇmāsika (garbha), i. 95. 83.

² In Manu are found also anirduça (above), "not ten years old"; ūna prefixed, "less" (not quite) so many years; and saptatyā sthaviraḥ, "old by seventy," viii. 394.

⁸ Elders or ancients are pūrve pūrvatare cāi 'va janāḥ, "men of old and still older times", xii. 268. 18 ("ancient exploits", pūrvavyatītāni vikrāntāni, i. 222. 29).

xii, 323. 14 (ib. 181, 14 bhujyate pāurvadehikam , , tatphalam pratipadyate, repeated again in other form, xiii. 7. 4). 332. 28, it is said that after birth one's senses come to the seventh and ninth stage, santamin navamin dacām, and then cease (in the tenth) as one expires. Civa is said to be the three stages, birth, life, and death of mortals (tridaca, below). ten stages are given by the scholiast, as embryo, birth, babyhood, childhood, boyhood, youth, old age, senility, last expiration, death; where bāla and kumāra, baby and child, are separated from boy. Ordinarily, old age, jarā implies senility, as in Yavāti's case, i. 75. 36, where this is attained after cācvatīh samāh¹. Uttanka lives a hundred years with his teacher before he discovers that he has reached old age, xiv. 56, 16 (abhyanujānithāh, sic, late carelessness; form yields to meter). The ten stages are supposed by the scholiast to be implied in Civa's solar(?) epithet, dvādaça, at xiii. 17. 94; for, says N., to the ten regular stages one adds in this case heaven and emancipation! Civa is also tridaça ib. 62 (N., tisro daçāh). Both bāla (also "fool") and kumāra are general terms for a boy, even including youth (sadvarsa eva bālah, i. 74. 5; cf. i. 100. 12 ff.; and 108. 14, 17, bāla of twelve or fourteen years; also kāumāram brahmacaryam, xiv. 53. 26, "chastity from youth up"); yuvan is applied to the heroes even after they are grown up and become grandfathers, and connotes the whole period between boyhood, yuvā sodaçavarsah, xiv. 56. 22, and old age, answering to our middle-aged, though sometimes distinct from it. Thus in x. 3. 11, yāuvana is the age of folly contrasted with middle, madhya, and old age. Applied to age, jyestha is old, kanīyānso vivardhante jyesthā hīyanta eva ca, "the younger stronger grow; the aged, less", ii. 53. 25. Instead of daçā, we find vrddhatām prāptah is explained as pramāne parame sthitah, the highest measure of age (N. as Upanisads). Compare iii. 71. 33, vayahpramānam, "the measure of this age."

The norm of life is a century: çatāyur uktaķ puruṣaḥ sarvavedeṣu (cf. AB. ii. 17. 1), v. 37. 9; (çatavīryaç ca xiii. 104. 1). A good man reaches that age, varṣaçatin, çatavarsabhāk, iii. 314, 28 (cause of short life, xiii, 104 and 144). Sinners of twenty and thirty cannot live to the age of one hundred, vincutivarsāh (etc.) parena varsaçatān na bhavisyanti, xii. 28, 10. The poor reach a hundred years. catavarsāh, xii. 28. 27. Common is the repetition of the old phase "hundred autumns," çaradām çatam: jīva susukhī ç. ç., i. 74, 64; sukhinī ç. ç., 1, 199, 11; samjīva ç. ç., iii. 78, 25 (varsāvutam, 28); sa jīvet c. c., iii, 166, 17. The same in terms of years or summers: jived varsaçatam, vi. 23. 25; jivatv esa catam samāh, ii. 68. 87; modamānāh catam samāh, ii. 62. 9; nityam bhavatu te buddhir esā rājañ chatam samāh, i. 200. 26; (rājā) bhavisyasi çatam samāh, iii, 249. 34. examples show the indefinite extension. So in the older phrase, e. g. xii. 38, 11, bhava nas tvam mahārāja rāje 'ha caradāji catam: i. 207. 20, tena tisthantu nagare Pāndavāh caradām catam. The phrase has become equivalent to "many years." When the crocodile girls are cursed for a hundred years, catain samāh, i. 216. 23, the statement is made that "hundred" and "hundred thousand" are vague phrases for "ever", 217. 8, catam catasahasram tu sarvam aksayyavācakam. Compare ii. 15. 18 ff., where one hundred and one hundred and one are both indefinite. A late and rare noun is cārada (the adi, is eommon), garbho vavrdhe sapta cāradān, iii, 99, 24.

In the old legends, the heroines, Cakuntalā, Damayantī, Sāvitrī, Prthā, and Krsnā herself are adult at the time of marriage. But adult may mean no more than twelve years, the age of Sītā and Juliet. In the didactic parts of the epic, girls are required to be wed as babies. Virāta's daughter plays doll, but this again may represent maturity (just after the marriage she becomes pregnant). The rule is that a man of thirty wed a girl of ten before puberty (nagnikā); a man of twenty-one, a girl of seven, xiii, 44. 14. Manu ix. 94 raises these ages to twelve and eight, but in the latter ease the man is three times eight. Gobh. G. S. iii. 4. 2. savs nagnikā tu cresthā. Krsnā's age is mentioned some fifteen years or more after the great war, and even at this time she is delicately said to be madhyam vayah kim cid ira sprçanti, "as it were just about grazing on middle age", xv. 25. 9. She would have been at least fifty according to the poem itself; but perhaps it would be indecorous to press this point.

The original plan of this division of my subject-matter included a section on the syntax of time-expressions and another on epic dates. The former section has grown into a complete article and will be found in AJP. No. 93. The latter will form an excursus to the next paper in the series, which will treat of epic chronology and astronomy.

PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY,

AT ITS

MEETING IN BOSTON, MASS.,

1902.

THE annual meeting of the Society was held in Boston, Mass., on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of Easter week, April 3d, 4th, and 5th, in the lecture room of the Boston Public Library.

The following members were in attendance at one or more of the sessions:

Arnold, W. R.	Haupt	Moore, G. F.	Torrey
Atkinson	Haynes	Moore, Mrs. M. H.	Toy
Binney	Higginson	Moxom	Ward, W. H.
Blake	Hopkins, E. W.	Oertel	Warren, W. F.
Bloomfield	Huxley	Orne	Werren
Brooks, Miss	Hyvernat	Oussani	Williams, F. W.
Carus	Jackson	Platner, J. W.	Winchester, Miss
Ember	Jewett	Runkle, Miss	Winslow
Fanning	Kellner	Ruutz-Rees, Mrs.	Woods
Foote	Lanman	Scott	Wright, T. F.
Gottheil	Lilley	Seiple
Gray	Michelson	Smith	[Total, 46.]

The first session of the Society began on Thursday morning at eleven o'clock, with Dr. William Hayes Ward, the first Vice-President, in the chair.

The reading of the minutes of the last annual meeting, held in New York, April 11th, 12th, and 13th, 1901, was dispensed with.

The report of the Committee of Arrangements was presented by the Chairman, Professor Moore, in the form of a printed programme. The succeeding sessions of the Society were appointed for Thursday and Friday afternoons at half past two o'clock, and for Friday and Saturday mornings at nine o'clock; the session on Friday afternoon was set apart for the reading of papers on the history of religions. Arrangements were also made for a dinner at the University Club on Thursday evening, and for an informal gathering on Friday evening. By the courtesy of the Director the members of the Society were invited to visit the Boston Museum of Fine Arts at their convenience.

The following persons, recommended by the Directors, were duly elected (for convenience, the names of those elected at later sessions are included in this list):

HONORARY MEMBERS.

Prof. Richard Garbe, Tübingen, Germany. Prof. Richard Pischel, Berlin, Germany. Prof. Julius Wellhausen, Göttingen, Germany.

CORPORATE MEMBERS.

Prof. Willis J. Beecher, Auburn, N. Y. Mr. W. M. Crane, Cambridge, Mass. Mr. Aaron Ember, Baltimore, Md. Dr. Carl C. Hansen, San Francisco, Cal. Mr. Walter D. Hopkins, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Henry M. Huxley, Cambridge, Mass. Mr. S. H. Langdon, New York, N. Y. Dr. Enno Littmann, Princeton, N. J. Mrs. G. F. Moore, Cambridge, Mass. Mr. Horace M. Ramsey, San Mateo, Cal. Mr. J. Nelson Robertson, Toronto, Canada. Dr. Arthur W. Ryder, Cambridge, Mass. Mr. W. G. Seiple, Baltimore, Md. Mr. David B. Spooner, Benares, India. Miss Olive M. Winchester, Cambridge, Mass.

MEMBERS OF THE SECTION FOR THE HISTORICAL STUDY OF RELIGIONS.

Prof. M. H. Morgan, Cambridge, Mass. Rev. Charles S. Sanders, Aintab, Turkey. Rev. N. H. Williams, Palmetto, Florida.

[Total, 21.]

The Corresponding Secretary, Professor Hopkins, in reporting the correspondence for the year, said: Letters were received in due course from those elected to membership at the last Meeting, all of whom accepted. The Seminar für Orientalische Sprachen, Berlin, and the newly formed Korea Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society have at their request been put upon the list of exchanges, and letters of acknowledgment have been duly received. The editor of the Oriental Bibliography has also written to thank the Society for its subvention, and a receipt for the money sent was received from the publishers. In response to the invitation of the University of Glasgow to send delegates to its four hundred and fiftieth anniversary, President Gilman appointed Professor Jackson to represent the Society, and, in accordance with the instructions of the Directors, given at the last Meeting, a Latin greeting from the Society to the University, engrossed and suitably encased, was forwarded by your Secretary to Professor Jackson, who delivered it to the University. An invitation was also sent to the Society to appoint a delegate to the Bicentennial Celebration of Yale University. This invitation came to hand after the last Meeting, and Professor Lanman was appointed by the President to represent the Society, which has received through him a bronze medal commemorating the event, the gift of the University to this Society. A letter was received from President Gilman immediately after the last Meeting, at which it will be remembered he was unable to be present, thanking the Society "for their continued confidence," as indicated by his re-election to the office of President. The Secretary is sorry to say that another letter has just come from President Gilman stating that it will also be impossible for him, in view of his plan to sail for Europe in a few days, to be present at this Meeting, and desiring your Secretary to convey his expression of regret to his colleagues. Letters expressing the writers' regret at being unable to attend this Meeting and conveying pleasant greetings to the Society have also been received from Dr. Francis Brown, from Prof. Morris Jastrow, Jr., and from Rev. Louis Grout, one of the oldest Corresponding Members of the Society.

From two members of the Society communications have been received relative to The Çakuntalā bibliography of Mr. Schuyler published in the volume of this year. Dr. Grierson in one of these communications offered the following suggestion, that there should be added to the translation of the bibliography a 'Popular' edition of Sir William Jones' translation, published in 1887 by Brojendro Lall Doss, Calcutta; and that (on p. 244) "Kauva" should be Kunwar (Kumvara=Kumāra). Goldmark's Overture is not in Mr. Schuyler's list, but in replying to this communication (through the Secretary) the latter says that it was "omitted intentionally, as being merely an orchestral music of which the title alone has anything to do with Çakuntalā, and Goldmark never wrote the opera to which the overture was to belong." "Dr. Grierson," says Mr. Schuyler, "is of course right" in the other correction.

Another letter from Dr. Grierson to your Secretary is of interest as showing to what results the extended Linguistic Survey of India is likely to lead. There is, in Dr. Grierson's opinion, good ground for believing that the great family war of the Hindu epic is in so far historical as that the poem represents not only a war between two tribes but a national war of supremacy between two great nations, which between them contained practically the whole of Aryan (and mixed-blood) India. This theory is being borne out in a most astonishing way by the Linguistic Survey, which has made probable the existence of two different streams of immigration, one, the earlier, from the North-west, and one from the North through the Gilgit and Chitral country, which latter, coming later, split apart the homogeneous mass of first settlers, who, racially allied but dialectically different, were driven to the wall in a semicircle about the Middle or Holy Land of the Sanskrit-speaking Aryans.

A letter from Dr. Burgess has also been received and may fitly be mentioned here since it contains the cheering information that the great sculptured Buddhistic monument at Sânchi is at last to be worthily photographed.

Your Secretary has also received a note from Professor Jackson apropos of a remark in the last number of the Journal, p. 370, to the effect that the spiked bed is now "out of fashion." Professor Jackson remarks that though out of fashion it is not entirely out of use: "At Ahmedabad I saw one Yogin using a spiked bed penance." So far as your Secretary knows, this form of asceticism is not clearly alluded to in Sanskrit literature (there are a few cases where "postures" of Yogins may imply it, but this is uncertain) prior to the end of the epic, and curiously enough it is there not a Yogin but a female devotee who, "to win the grace of Çiva reclined upon (spiked) clubs," xiii. 14. 97, where the commentator is careful to point out that the clubs were really spiked.

Another communication will be of importance perhaps to the few members of this Society interested in Polynesian dialects. Your Secretary has received from the Department of Education at Manila a letter announcing the discovery of many old books by the Spanish friars treating of the Philippine dialects.

Your Secretary is not sufficiently familiar with the literature on gypsy-dialects to know whether a long communication from our former consul in Baghdâd, a Corresponding Member of this Society for several years, Dr. J. C. Sundberg, presents facts unknown to specialists in giving a very interesting list of Sanskrit (Hindu) words which form even at this late date a part of the every-day vocabulary of the Norwegian gypsies, who, as Dr. Sundberg (he has been intimate with these nomads) rightly states, came through Persia from India in the middle ages. Dr. Sundberg instances the (Norwegian) gypsy deity Dundra as a corruption of Devendra, and their own national designation Tater as a corruption of thethera, brass-worker ("all the gypsies of Norway are expert brass-workers"), and subjoins the following list of words in ordinary use among them : $ch\bar{u}r\bar{i}$, knife; $s\bar{u}\bar{i}$, needle; $j\bar{u}\bar{i}$, louse; $p\bar{u}n\bar{i}$, water; lou, salt; $d\bar{u}k$, sickness; cor (chor), thief; $r\bar{u}p$, silver; $d\bar{u}d$, milk; all of which are but slightly changed Sanskrit words; and the Sanskrit-gypsy verbs ("the gypsy uses only the root") $kh\bar{a}$, eat; $p\bar{\imath}$, drink; $j\bar{a}$, go; jan, know; $r\bar{\imath}$, weep. Some of these words have been registered before as part of the gypsy-language of Europe in general, but the list may perhaps be worth citing here as representing, on Dr. Sundberg's evidence, the colloquial speech of the Norwegians in particular.

Finally, your Secretary has to report the names of members of the Society who have died since the last Meeting:

HONORARY MEMBERS.

Professor Albrecht Weber, Berlin. Professor C. P. Tiele, Leiden.

CORPORATE MEMBERS.

Professor J. Henry Thayer, Cambridge, Mass. Dr. Charles Rice, New York.
Mr. David P. Barnitz, Des Moines, Iowa.

CORRESPONDING MEMBER

Dr. D. Bethune McCartee, Tokio,

After reading his report, Professor Hopkins made some remarks in regard to the work of Professor Weber, from whose son a letter had been received since the Professor's death, giving an account of his work during the last few years when, though unable to see, he still prosecuted his Oriental researches with the help of his son and secretary.

. Professor Toy spoke briefly on the life and work of Professor Tiele and Professor Thayer; Professor Lanman on Dr. Rice and Mr. Barnitz; and Professor Williams on Dr. McCartee.

The report of the Treasurer, Prof. F. W. Williams, had been duly audited and was as follows:

REPORT OF THE AUDITING COMMITTEE.

We hereby certify that we have examined the account book of the Treasurer of this Society and have found the same correct, and that the foregoing account is in conformity therewith. We have also compared the entries in the cash book with the vouchers and bank and pass books and have found all correct.

HANNS OERTEL, FRANK K. SANDERS, Auditors.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., April 2, 1902.

Professors F. K. Sanders and Hanns Oertel were appointed a committee to audit the accounts of the Treasurer for the next year.

The report of the Librarian, Mr. Van Name, was presented through Professor Williams:

The accessions of the year amount to 81 volumes, 79 parts of volumes and 168 pamphlets.

The most noteworthy among these are:

1. Lady Meux MSS. Nos. 2-5, containing: The Miracles of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and the Life of Hannâ (Saint Anne), and the Magical Prayers of 'Ahěta Mikâêl; the Ethiopian texts edited with English translations by E. A. Wallis Budge. London, 1900. 4°.

2. The Kashmirian Atharva-Veda, reproduced by Chromophotography from the Manuscript in the University Library at Tübingen. Baltimore and Stuttgart, 1901. 3 pts. 4°.

(One of the ten copies for which the American Oriental Society subscribed.)

The report of the Editors of the Journal was presented by Professor Hopkins, as follows:

Apart from the Index volume, in regard to which Professor Moore, who has edited it, will make a special report, the editors for the current year have brought out two parts of the Journal, the First Half and Second Half of Vol. xxii, containing 420 pages, including the Proceedings of the last Meeting, the List of Members and Notices, or 401 pages without the last two additions, that is, slightly more than the authorized number of pages, which should not exceed 400. In regard to the Second Half of this Volume, there is nothing to report except that it was published at the usual time, in January, 1902, under the supervision of both The First Half was issued during the preceding summer under peculiar circumstances. A great part of it was a collection of Jubilee papers intended as an offering to the President of the Society and President of Johns Hopkins University on the attainment of his seventieth birthday, July 6. Unfortunately not only did this early date require very rapid press-work, which the printers were scarcely able to accomplish, and which to some extent affected the accuracy of the work, but this First Half suffered also from the fact that the papers in it were chiefly Semitic, and the Semitic editor was out of the country. The editor of Biblia requested permission to reprint in that journal the article of President Warren published in the First Part, and this request was granted.

Professors Bloomfield, Gottheil, and Jackson were appointed a committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year.

At twelve o'clock the Society proceeded to the reading of papers, Professor Toy presiding. The following communications were presented:

Dr. Arnold, The interpretation of קרנים מידו לן, Hab. iii. 4. Dr. Blake, The principal dialects of the Philippine islands. In connection with his paper Dr. Blake presented an elementary grammar of Tagálog.

Mr. Ember, The pronunciation of Hebrew among Russian Jews.

Dr. Foote, Parallels in Latin poets to the Song of Songs.

Dr. Gray, Note on the old Persian inscription of Behistun.

Recess was then taken till half past two o'clock.

The Society reassembled at half past two o'clock, Dr. Ward presiding.

The reading of communications was resumed, as follows: Professor Haupt, An erotic poem by Samuel Hunagid.

Professor Hopkins, Notes on some historical aspects of the Mahābhārata.

Professor Jackson briefly described some books given to the Society by the Parsi Panchayat of Bombay, and presented Indo-Iranian Notes (on a fragment of the Avesta, and on the place of Zoroaster).

Professor Lanman, Report upon the approaching completion of Whitney's Atharva-Veda. Remarks were made by Professors Bloomfield and Smith, and Dr. Scott.

Professor Oertel, Contributions from the Jāiminīya Brāh-mana, Fourth Series.

Mr. Oussani, An unpublished Christian Arabic legend of Seif-el-Mesîh (the Sword of the Messiah).

Dr. Ryder, Note on brhachandas, AV. iii. 12. 3. Remarks were made by Professors Bloomfield and Jackson.

Professor Bloomfield presented a paper by Professor Stratton, of Punjab University, on a dated Gandhära figure.

Mr. Seiple, Theocritean parallels to the Song of Songs. Remarks were made by Professors Haupt, Toy, Lanman, and Hopkins.

Professor Hyvernat, The historical side of some manuscripts of Bar-Bahlûl's Lexicon.

The Society then adjourned to Friday morning.

The Society met on Friday morning at half past nine, Dr. Ward presiding.

The following communications were presented:

Dr. Arnold, Rp in the story of the tower, Gen. xi, 1-9.

Professor Torrey, The Arabic manuscripts at Yale University. Mr. Orne spoke of the manuscripts at Harvard and Professor Haupt of the collection recently acquired by Princeton.

Professor Gottheil, from the committee on cataloguing the Oriental manuscripts in America, reported progress, and the committee was continued.

Professor Toy, The Hebrew text of Ben-Sira. Remarks were made by Professor Gottheil.

Miss Runkle, Analysis of the Pāli canonical text, the Udāna. Remarks were made by Professors Lanman and Bloomfield, and Dr. Scott.

Dr. Scott, The owls and parrots of Polynesia.

Professor Bloomfield presented the chromo-photographic reproduction of the Kashmirian Atharva-Veda, edited by Bloomfield and Garbe.

Mr. Huxley, Syrian wedding and funeral songs.

Dr. Foote, Note on 2 Kings vi, 6.
Professor Moore announced the completion of the Index to the Journal, vols, i-xx, and presented advance copies thereof. Remarks were made by Professors Hopkins and Lanman.

Dr. Ryder, Krsnanātha's commentary on the Bengal recension of the Cakuntala. Remarks were made by Professors Hopkins. Bloomfield, and Lanman.

At 12.45 the Society took a recess till 2.30.

The Society reassembled at half past two, Dr. Ward presid-The session was devoted to the reading of papers belonging to the Section for the Historical Study of Religions, in the following order:

Miss L. C. G. Grieve, Evidence of Satī among the early Greeks (read by Professor Jackson). Remarks were made by Professor Hopkins and Dr. Scott.

Professor Haupt, Biblical love-ditties.

Professor Hopkins, Beast fables in the Mahābhārata. Mr. Oussani, Popular superstitions in early Arabia.

Professor Jackson, The religion of the Achaemenian Kings, Second Series; classical allusions; also Indo-Iranian Notes, with photographs. In connection with this, Professor Hopkins presented, as a supplement to the report on correspondence, a letter from Dr. Burgess on a photograph of the monuments at Sânchi.

Professor Toy, Creator gods.

Dr. Ward, Symbols of Babylonian gods.

Mr. Kohut, Jewish contributions to Comparative folk-lore (read in abstract by the Recording Secretary).

At five o'clock the Society adjourned till Saturday morning.

The last session of the Society was held on Saturday morning. beginning at half past nine o'clock, with Professor Toy in the chair.

Professor Hopkins reported from the Directors that the next Meeting of the Society would be held in Baltimore, beginning on Thursday, April 16, 1903; and that Professors Haupt and Bloomfield, with the Corresponding Secretary, had been appointed a Committee on Arrangements. Also that the Directors had reappointed the editors of the Journal, Professors Hopkins and Torrev.

The Committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year reported, and by unanimous consent the ballot of the Society was cast for the following officers:

President—President Daniel Coit Gilman, of Baltimore.

Vice-Presidents—Dr. William Hayes Ward, of New York; Professor Crawford H. Toy, of Cambridge; Professor Charles R. Lanman, of Cambridge.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

OF THE

AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY.

With Amendments of April 1897.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I. This Society shall be called the American Oriental Society Article II. The objects contemplated by this Society shall be:—

- 1. The cultivation of learning in the Asiatic, African, and Polynesian languages, as well as the encouragement of researches of any sort by which the knowledge of the East may be promoted.
 - 2. The cultivation of a taste for oriental studies in this country.
- · 3. The publication of memoirs, translations, vocabularies, and other communications, presented to the Society, which may be valuable with reference to the before-mentioned objects.
 - 4. The collection of a library and cabinet.

ARTICLE III. The members of this Society shall be distinguished as corporate and honorary.

ARTICLE IV. All candidates for membership must be proposed by the Directors, at some stated meeting of the Society, and no person shall be elected a member of either class without receiving the votes of as many as three-fourths of all the members present at the meeting.

ARTICLE V. The government of the Society shall consist of a President, three Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary, a Recording Secretary, a Secretary of the Section for the Historical Study of Religions, a Treasurer, a Librarian, and seven Directors, who shall be annually elected by ballot, at the annual meeting.

ARTICLE VI. The President and Vice-Presidents shall perform the customary duties of such officers, and shall be ex officio members of the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE VII. The Secretaries, Treasurer, and Librarian shall be ex officio members of the Board of Directors, and shall perform their respective duties under the superintendence of said Board.

ARTICLE VIII. It shall be the duty of the Board of Directors to regulate the financial concerns of the Society, to superintend its publications, to earry into effect the resolutions and orders of the Society, and to exercise a general supervision over its affairs. Five Directors at any regular meeting shall be a quorum for doing business.

ARTICLE IX. An Annual meeting of the Society shall be held during Easter week, the days and place of the meeting to be determined by the Directors, said meeting to be held in Massachusetts at least once in three years. One or more other meetings, at the discretion of the Directors, may also be held each year at such place and time as the Directors shall determine.

ARTICLE X. There shall be a special Section of the Society, devoted to the historical study of religions, to which section others than members of the American Oriental Society may be elected in the same manner as is prescribed in Article IV.

ARTICLE XI. This Constitution may be amended, on a recommendation of the Directors, by a vote of three-fourths of the members present at an annual meeting.

BY-LAWS

- I. The Corresponding Secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Society, and it shall be his duty to keep, in a book provided for the purpose, a copy of his letters; and he shall notify the meetings in such manner as the President or the Board of Directors shall direct.
- II. The Recording Secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings of the Society in a book provided for the purpose.
- III. a. The Treasurer shall have charge of the funds of the Society; and his investments, deposits, and payments shall be made under the superintendence of the Board of Directors. At each annual meeting he shall report the state of the finances, with a brief summary of the receipts and payments of the previous year.
- III. b. After December 31, 1896, the fiscal year of the Society shall correspond with the calendar year.
- HII. c. At each annual business meeting in Easter week, the President shall appoint an auditing committee of two men—preferably men residing in or near the town where the Treasurer lives—to examine the Treasurer's accounts and vouchers, and to inspect the evidences of the Society's property, and to see that the funds called for by his balances are in his hands. The Committee shall perform this duty as soon as possible after the New Year's day succeeding their appointment, and shall report their findings to the Society at the next annual business meeting thereafter. If these findings are satisfactory, the Treasurer shall receive his acquittance by a certificate to that effect, which shall be recorded in the Treasurer's book, and published in the Proceedings.
- IV. The Librarian shall keep a catalogue of all books belonging to the Society, with the names of the donors, if they are presented, and shall at each annual meeting make a report of the accessions to the library during the previous year, and shall be farther guided in the discharge of his duties by such rules as the Directors shall prescribe.
- V. All papers read before the Society, and all manuscripts deposited by authors for publication, or for other purposes, shall be at the disposal of the Board of Directors, unless notice to the contrary is given to the Editors at the time of presentation.
- VI. Each corporate member shall pay into the treasury of the Society an annual assessment of five dollars; but a donation at any one time of seventy-five dollars shall exempt from obligation to make this payment.
- VII. Corporate and Honorary members shall be entitled to a copy of all the publications of the Society issued during their membership, and shall also have the privilege of taking a copy of those previously published, so far as the Society can supply them, at half the ordinary selling price.

- VIII. If any corporate member shall for two years fail to pay his assessments, his name may, at the discretion of the Directors, be dropped from the list of members of the Society.
- IX. Members of the Section for the Historical Study of Religions shall pay into the treasury of the Society an annual assessment of two dollars; and they shall be entitled to a copy of all printed papers which fall within the scope of the Section.
- X. Six members shall form a quorum for doing business, and three to adjourn.

SUPPLEMENTARY BY-LAW.

I. FOR THE LIBRARY.

- 1. The Library shall be accessible for consultation to all members of the Society, at such times as the Library of Yale College, with which it is deposited, shall be open for a similar purpose; further, to such persons as shall receive the permission of the Librarian, or of the Librarian or Assistant Librarian of Yale College.
- 2. Any member shall be allowed to draw books from the Library upon the following conditions: he shall give his receipt for them to the Librarian, pledging himself to make good any detriment the Library may suffer from their loss or injury, the amount of said detriment to be determined by the Librarian, with the assistance of the President, or of a Vice-President; and he shall return them within a time not exceeding three months from that of their reception, unless by special agreement with the Librarian this term shall be extended.
- 3. Persons not members may also, on special grounds, and at the discretion of the Librarian, be allowed to take and use the Society's books, upon depositing with the Librarian a sufficient security that they shall be duly returned in good condition, or their loss or damage fully compensated.

CONCERNING MEMBERSHIP.

It is not necessary for any one to be a professed Orientalist in order to become a member of the Society. All persons—men or women—who are in sympathy with the objects of the Society and willing to further its work are invited to give it their help. This help may be rendered by the payment of the annual assessments, by gifts to its library, or by scientific contributions to its Journal, or in all of these ways. Persons desiring to become members are requested to apply to the Treasurer, whose address is given above. Members receive the Journal free. The annual assessment is $5. The fee for Life-Membership is $75.

Persons interested in the Historical Study of Religion may become members of the Section of the Society organized for this purpose. The annual assessment is $2; members receive copies of all publications of the Society which fall within the scope of the Section.
